Soviet Forces West to Arm, Truman Says

Yugoslav Railroads Alerted for Sabotage

Belgrade, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Yugoslav railroad men were warned tonight to be on the alert for sabotage as a new Russian move against this country.

Todor Vujasinovic, Minister of Railroads, said at a conference of railway workers that the campaign of the Cominform (Communist Bureau of Information) against Yugoslavia had failed.

"The campaign began with a political attack and was followed by an economic blockade," Vujasinovic said.

"When things do not go as they should, do not be satisfied with the supposition that old material was to blame, because nowadays we can expect sabotage."

Reports have been circulating in Belgrade for some time of increasing sabotage.

One report, unconfirmed like the others, was that Soviet agents directed the recent unsuccessful attempt to destroy the great Jabalniva hydroelectric plant in Bosnia.

Three Wrecks, Fire Reported

Newspapers reported as "accidents" three train wrecks and the recent fire on the liner Partizanka, Yugoslavia's biggest ship, but normally the newspapers do not mention such stories at all.

Diplomatic quarters believe Russia by her openly threatening attitude may be trying to discourage Western countries from giving Tito economic and financial aid.

Immediately after the disclosure by Moscow of its note threatening "effective measures" unless alleged Yugoslav mistreatment of Russians was stopped, there was an atmosphere of alarm here. Some Western observers even saw the possibility of a Russian attack.

Also Aimed at West

But today responsible quarters suggested the Soviet note was partly propaganda, aimed at Western countries as well as at Tito.

Responsible quarters here see no likelihood that Russia plans any attack on Yugoslavia by its own forces or those of other Cominform countries.

But Russian pressure has increased steadily and is now expected to become even stronger.

Borba, the Communist newspaper organ, emphasized the defiant attitude which Tito and Communist Party members are taking toward Russia. Borba said the Russians of whose mistreatment Moscow complained were simply spies, and that they had confessed.

Yugoslavia, the newspaper said, will not be ruled by dictates from an "undemocratic" Russia, whom

Boy, 9, Can't Stop $15,360 Robbery; Toy Pistol Empty

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 22 (AP).—A pair of thieves stole $15,360 from an armored truck today while a 9-year-old boy looked on, wishing his toy pistol was loaded.

The truck was stolen while its attendants were making collections.

A few minutes later, the thieves drove up in the truck to a "brownish" car where Billy Ludlow was standing.

His hand on his holstered pistol, Billy watched intently as the men unloaded 21 bags of money from the truck and placed it in the other car.

"It was almost like a game of cops and robbers," Billy told police later. "I had a gun in my holster but I couldn't use it. It wasn't loaded."

After transferring the money, "they got in the brownish car and zoomed down the street," Billy said wistfully.

Finnish Reds' Strike 'Coup' Collapses

Helsinki, Finland, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Finnish Communist plans for a "revolutionary" general strike, intended to cripple the nation by creeping industrial paralysis, virtually collapsed today in failure.

Two of the country's big unions called off scheduled strikes.

Thousands of workers in unions already on strike streamed back to their jobs in defiance of their Communist leaders.

The two new strikes which did come off today failed utterly. They were in the transport and automobile repair industries.

Bus traffic between Helsinki and the provinces, and in the capital itself, was not even interrupted. Service was on normal schedule by 10 a. m. Employers in automobile repair plants said almost 100 per cent of their men reported for duty as usual.

The government charged the Communists with plans for industrial paralysis that were actually a bid to seize power by a revolutionary coup. It accepted the challenge, and called on the army to aid it. Some Communists were jailed.

Anti-Communist leaders of the Finnish Federation of Trade Unions issued an ultimatum threatening the expulsion of all Communist-led unions unless the strikes ended by Tuesday.

Today the executive committee of the Union of Leather, Shoe and Rubber Workers, scheduled to strike Tuesday, notified employers the walkout had been "postponed."

Later the Union of Textile Workers notified employers that it, too, had decided to "postpone" action.

Communist leaders sought vigorously to keep the harbor strike effective. But more than 600 dockworkers unloaded 18 strikebound freighters in Hamina harbor in southern Finland. In huge Hangoe harbor in western Finland work was resumed on loading of four ships.

Price Support Goes Too Far, Lucas Warns

By The Associated Press

Senate Majority Leader Lucas (D., Ill.) said yesterday that the Government has gone too far in its farm price support program.

Unless this program is cut back, he said, "people will be so bitter that we'll break the whole Federal farm program down."

Lucas' idea:

Limit mandatory Government price-supporting loans and purchases to a few major crops, such as corn, wheat, cotton.

Give the Secretary of Agriculture broad authority to support prices on the so-called non-basic commodities, such as meats, dairy products, fruits and less important crops.

Lucas made his comment after a meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee, where Secretary of Agriculture Brannan again plugged for his own plan. Lucas refused to say which of two rival plans he preferred. It's been a bumper year for farm plans. Congress has considered:

The Brannan plan—this Administration-supported plan would allow meat, dairy products and other perishables to go to whatever price the market would bring. If this fell below a previously determined "fair return," the Government — i.e., the taxpayers — would make up the difference by a subsidy to farmers.

The Gore plan—this plan, so called because it was backed by Representative Gore (D., Tenn.), would continue the law in effect now. It would support prices rigidly at 90 per cent of parity. Parity is a price that is supposed to be fair both to the farmer and the consumer.

The Gore bill has passed the House, and now is before the Senate.

The Aiken plan—named for

Feldman Case Up Today in Influence Quiz

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

The case of Maj. Gen. Herman Feldman will be taken up today by the Senate subcommittee investigating 5-percenters, or influence peddlers.

General Feldman, Quartermaster General of the Army, was suspended July 16 on the ground that he failed to exhibit judgment expected of an officer in his position. Secretary of the Army Gray said of him, specifically, that he had "furnished procurement information under circumstances which appear irregular."

General Feldman's name has been linked at the hearings with that of James V. Hunt, who earned large fees as a management counselor. Hunt, according to earlier testimony, told prospective clients of his close friendship with Feldman and claimed to have influ-

Attempt to Terrorize Doctors Charged in Health Plan Fight

By James E. Hague
Post Reporter

An American Medical Association spokesman charged yesterday that the AMA's campaign against compulsory health insurance had led to an attempt "by the people in power" to terrorize the medical profession.

Clem Whitaker, hired last year with his wife to direct the AMA campaign, made the charge during the first of a series of AMA-sponsored round tables designed to bring its side of the controversial subject direct to the press and radio.

He said that when his company accepted the AMA account he heard reports that there would be reprisals and that even before he set up offices in Chicago he was informed that agents of the Department of Justice had gone to the offices of the Chicago Medical Society and "demanded the right to go over the books."

Asked by a reporter if he was charging the Justice Department with the attempt to terrorize the medical profession, Whitaker simply repeated his statement about the visit and said: "Draw your own conclusions."

Arms Aid May Include Fund for Asia

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A "contingency fund" earmarked for possible use in China and other Far East areas—at the President's discretion—may be added to the Administration's arms-aid program, it was indicated yesterday.

While a proposal of this type—for a 100 million dollar fund—was offered in the House debate on the arms bill last week, and rejected, it is expected to have more success in the Senate.

Administration and Senate leaders yesterday were reported jockeying for position over this issue, with the State Department taking the view it will not institute or formally approve or oppose such an addition to the arms bill.

China Bloc May Be Key

The outcome of this maneuvering may directly affect the size of the over-all arms program approved by Congress, for the China-aid proponents in the Senate command a large bloc of votes.

These votes could be the key factor in determining how much of the $540,495,000 cut out of the $1,450,000,000 arms program by the House will be restored by the Senate.

Senator John Foster Dulles (R., N. Y.) told reporters yesterday he has been discussing the China-aid issue with Ambassador-at-large Philip C. Jessup, who heads a special committee now reviewing this Nation's China policy.

Dulles said Jessup indicated the State Department "may acquiesce" to an arrangement which could permit arms aid to non-Communist forces in China on a when-as-and-if basis, as determined by the President.

Against Cut in Basic Program

This follows previously expressed Administration views, with the provision that the Administration will not institute such a move, and that funds authorized should not be cut out of the basic program.

President Truman yesterday reiterated his opposition to any reduction in that program, as he addressed the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Miami.

While he made no mention of China in that address the Administration is flatly against any new military aid authorization earmarked for Nationalist China, for that would be a reversal of the position set forth in the recent "White Paper" on China.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson, on August 8, told the combined Senate Foreign Relations-Armed Services Committees, which

Spaatz Calls Cut in Planes 'Dangerous'

Gen. Carl (Tooey) Spaatz told Congress yesterday that the Administration plan to cut back the Air Force to 48 groups was a "very dangerous" move.

The retired USAF chief made the statement before the House Armed Services Committee, as its chairman, Representative Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) said that another effort will be made to get funds for a 70-group force before Congress adjourns.

Earlier this year, the House overruled President Truman's request for a 48-group force and added 800 million dollars to the military budget to continue building to a 70-unit air armada.

Reduced by Senators

The Senate Appropriations Committee eliminated the boost and the Senate is expected to back that action. Both Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington and Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg, present USAF chief of staff, have indorsed the reduction.

Spaatz was called by the committee in its investigation of the B-36 procurement program. He testified that the big Consolidated-Vultee intercontinental bomber, and American monopoly of atomic weapons, are "the greatest forces for peace in the world."

But for these two, he declared, Russia's armies could overrun most of Europe and Asia "in a relatively short time."

For 70-Group Force

The pioneer air fighter strongly backed a 70-group air force, but declared it would be a "mistake" to divert funds from the European military aid program to build it. We need both, he said.

Spaatz declared that Europe must be strengthened before Russia gets intercontinental planes and A-bombs. Even after these events occur, he testified, the American intercontinental bomber and atomic weapons still will be the "most potent instruments for maintaining a balance of power for peace."

Representative Leroy Johnson asked him if the cutback from a

B-36 Probers May Drop Air Policy Review

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Members of the House Armed Services Committee are seriously considering dropping a scheduled broad review of the Nation's air power policies from the B-36 probe agenda.

After two weeks of testimony here and on the West Coast, a large majority of the group is prepared to clear the Air Force of charges of wrongdoing in procurement of the B-36, a survey yesterday showed.

"It's as clean as a hound's tooth," said Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.).

Some Would Go Further

Some members want to go even further and either cancel or "brush over lightly" the other main phase of the committee investigation. That is an evaluation of strategic bombing and determination whether Air Force and Department of Defense planning unduly emphasizes it to the detriment of other arms.

The policy subcommittee of the group meets this morning behind closed doors just prior to the open hearing. Members are expected to determine what further witnesses will be called now, and may discuss the future course of the probe.

Top Officers to Appear

Several top Air Force officers—including Lieut. Gens. Lauris Norstad and Nathan Twining—have been listed to testify. Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson and Floyd Odlum, Consolidated-Vultee board chairman, also may be heard today.

Charges made by Representative James E. Van Zandt (R., Pa.) that political pressure influenced an expansion of B-36 orders linked the names of Johnson and Odlum with such "irregularities."

Van Zandt was not present yesterday as a parade of top Air Force chiefs took the stand to testify that the bomber's merit alone caused them to give it the leading place in the USAF's arsenal of weapons. His office said he was in Miami at the VFW con-

Nothing Sinister, Says Wolfson Of Offer for Transit Stock

By S. Oliver Goodman
Post Reporter

Louis E. Wolfson was in town yesterday and took time out to explain there's nothing mysterious or sinister about his wanting to invest $2,189,160 in the Capital Transit Co.

At the Mayflower Hotel, the 37-year-old Florida businessman expressed surprise at the fuss and opposition that have greeted the announcement that he and eight associates are willing to purchase a block of 109,458 transit shares from the North American Co.

He readily answered questions, asserting he "had nothing to hide." He and four associates were here for the day, he explained, to file additional financial data with the Interstate Commerce Commission at the latter's request.

If the deal is permitted by the ICC, he was asked if he intends to take an active part in the transit company's management.

"Mainly," he replied, "my associates and I are buying this stock strictly as a long-term investment. We've studied the company and feel it's a depression-proof investment. In the distant future perhaps, I would like to take an active part in the management. I feel, however, that the present management is capable and has built up one of the finest transit systems in the country."

In response to a pointed question on whether he or his associates own or control any companies that have products or services which could be sold to Capital Transit, he said:

"We've gone over that very thoroughly and the answer is none whatsoever."

He pointed out that his interests are chiefly in pipe and mill supply firms, a chain of movie houses, two moviemakers and a Florida real estate firm.

Basic policies of Capital Transit, he asserted, are sound and "even if he could" he wouldn't make any changes. The dividend rate, he added, provides a fair return on investment. The fares are "rea-

Writer, 36, Stabbed in Chest By Man He Tries to Assist

A former Washington newspaper reporter, now a free lance writer, was in serious condition at Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, last night, as result of a stab wound suffered when he attempted to be a "good Samaritan."

He is Alfred Toombs, 36, now of Colston Point, Md. His wife, Mrs. Constance Toombs, who was with him late Sunday night, said the wound was inflicted when he went to aid a man previously "badly beaten."

He received blood transfusions at St. Mary's Hospital, Leonardtown, Md., before being transferred yesterday to Johns Hopkins Hospital.

Mrs. Toombs said the stabbing occurred after she and her husband noticed a number of men apparently arguing at a place called Avenue, Md.

"Just as we started to drive around the cars, a colored man who seemed to have been very badly beaten staggered and ran out of the crowd. He got into a car and started along the road ahead of us.

"After we had gone a little way, the colored man's car stopped. Alfred thought he had collapsed. He got out to see if he could help.

Every Effort For Peace Obstructed, He Declares

Military Aid Bill Price We Must Pay To Restrain Russia, He Tells Veterans

Miami, Fla., Aug. 22 (U.P.).—President Truman said today that Russia has blocked every effort to establish a real peace and that the western world must begin arming itself immediately for defense.

His $1,450,000,000 arms-for-Europe program, he told a cheering Veterans of Foreign Wars convention, is part of a stiff bill that must be footed to discourage the Soviet Union from starting a fight.

Mr. Truman set a speed record for Presidential jaunts in a flying trip in which he spent only two hours and one minute in Miami, a city that was dividing its interest between his visit and an intensifying tropical hurricane still 320 miles off the Florida coast.

But there was only bright sunshine for the presidential party and an enthusiastic reception from the 7500 VFW members and their families gathered for their national annual confab.

The veterans interrupted Mr. Truman's "price of peace" speech with spontaneous applause on several occasions, but the sober-voiced President was aiming his words more at a Congress whose economy bloc wants to trim down the military aid program for Atlantic Pact partners and five other nations.

"Investment in Security"

Mr. Truman said Russia had blocked every attempt to "wipe out the fear of aggression," to achieve peace "with freedom and justice."

"We should therefore undertake a program of military assistance without delay," he said. "The cost of such a program is considerable, but it represents an investment in security that will be worth many times its cost. It is part of the price of peace."

Truman Studies 'How To Break Into Politics'

By The Associated Press

President Truman disclosed yesterday that he has been studying a pamphlet entitled "How to Break Into Politics."

But he said with a twinkle it isn't exactly the goal he is seeking.

Mr. Truman held a copy of the pamphlet, written by Martin E. O'Shaughnessy, as he stepped down from the presidential plane after a three-hour-and-ten-minute flight from Miami, Fla.

"It's a good little book," he told newsmen. Then he grinned: "What I want to know is how to break out of politics."

Oath Ceremony Colorful When Gray Turns Red

The newly installed Assistant Secretary of the Army had a new nickname yesterday—and his boss a red face.

The nickname: Sugar.

It began when Army Secretary Gordon Gray dictated a telegram the other day inviting guests to witness the swearing in of Archibald S. Alexander as Assistant Secretary. The middle name is Stephens.

In the background is the Army's well-known code system to identify initials and spell out words, such as a for able, b for baker, c for Charles and s for sugar.

Here is what Alexander's friends received from Gray:

"You are cordially invited to attend the swearing in of Mr. Archibald Sugar Alexander as Assistant Secretary of the Army in my office in the Pentagon at 11 o'clock Monday morning, August 22."

A woman held up the Art and Card Shop, 1330 14th st. nw., at 7 o'clock last night and ran off with $80 after threatening a clerk.

Mrs. Kathryn Sheats, an employe of the shop, told police that the woman entered the store and told her to "get back or I'll shoot." She said the woman appeared to have a gun under her dress.

The woman was described as a Negro, tall, thin, wearing a black dress, and a hat with a feather and a veil.

Rent Control Fund Cut Is Made Final

Row Upsets School Aid Round Table

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

Efforts to restore the cut in rent control funds were abandoned in the Senate yesterday, making final a three-million-dollar reduction in the Housing Expediter's budget, as initiated by the House.

Senator Paul H. Douglas (D., Ill.) withdrew a motion to permit Housing Expediter Tighe E. Woods to spend the $17,500,000 in 9 months instead of 12 months, as the bill provides.

Douglas said he acted after assurances from Senators on both sides of the aisle that a request for more money in January will be supported if the situation calls for it.

Warning by Douglas

In giving up the fight, Douglas said he will regard it as a breach of faith if money is needed next year and is not granted.

"If I find I have been seduced in this matter," he said," I will attempt to tear my seducers from stem to stern."

Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Nebr.), Senate Republican leader and GOP Senators Homer Ferguson (Mich.) and Forrest C. Donnell (Mo.) promptly countered that they were not among those making any such commitment.

Reached at the airport as he was leaving Washington, Woods said:

"I'm pleased and grateful with this reaffirmation of congressional support for effective rent control were housing is still critical.

Can "Carry Out Mandate"

"This means that we can carry out the President's mandate to protect tenants from rent gouging and illegal evictions, and at the same time assure justice to landlords."

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) said that while he believed the Senate would be willing to cooperate with Woods, he thought it should be clear that Government agencies have an obligation to try to live within the funds provided by Congress.

Senator Irving M. Ives (R., N. Y.) said he had hoped to support Douglas' motion, but he added he felt sure that if it becomes necessary to ask for more funds later to protect the citizens of areas where rent controls are imperative, Congress would be fair and reasonable.

O'Mahoney Opposed

The Senate acted after Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (D., Wyo.), head of the Senate-House conference, warned that the House would certainly reject any effort to increase rent control funds.

This, O'Mahoney declared, would throw into a deadlock the whole $7,617,739,000 independent offices appropriations bill, carrying funds for the Atomic Energy Commission, the Veterans' Administration, and other agencies.

The Senator read a letter from the Budget Bureau which said it "may be possible to operate the (rent control) program on a declining scale from month to month."

After settling the rent control issue, the Senate approved the conference report and sent it back to the House to have minor differences reconciled.

Senate, House Slicing

President Truman originally had asked for $26,750,000 to enforce rent control for the 12 months which began last July 1. The Senate voted to reduce that to $21,667,000, and the House later made the figure of $17,500,000.

Douglas opened his drive to restore part of the cut after Woods announced last week that he would be forced to decontrol a third of all the rental areas still under ceilings, or discharge 30 per cent of his agency's force.

Woods has since promised that the agency will continue strict supervision of controls in big city areas where housing problems are most acute. He is still conferring, a spokesman said, with regional rent control officials as to which areas should be decontrolled.

On the House side, Representative Jacob K. Javits (R., N. Y.) pledged his support in any effort to obtain a deficiency appropriation for rent control.

Veteran Loans Out

Meanwhile, the House Banking and Currency Committee reluctantly agreed to knock from the new omnibus housing bill a provision authorizing 300 million dollars in direct home loans to veterans.

The decision was made after the House Rules Committee objected to the clause, and refused to clear the bill for floor action unless it was eliminated. Members raised objections to the principle of the Government making direct person-to-person loans for housing.

The government's biggest operation in the private housing field now is the insurance of home mortgages made by private lenders.

The banking group previously had knocked out of the bill a proposal for one billion dollars in direct government loans to housing co-operatives.

White House Disapproval

Raymond M. Foley, Housing Administrator, told the Banking Committee on July 25 that the legislation to authorize direct loans was "not in accord with the program of the President." He pointed to present provisions of law providing veterans loans and mortgage guarantees.

The Banking Committee was forced to revise the bill in order to get it to a vote. Late in the congressional session it is virtually impossible to get a bill to a vote without Rules Committee sanction.

The bill still calls for about three billion dollars in mortgage insurance to help persons of modest incomes build homes.

Appointed to Senate . . .

Providence, R. I., Aug. 22 (AP). Edward L. Leahy of Bristol, was named today by Gov. John O. Pastore as interim United States Senator to replace J. Howard McGrath, newly appointed United States Attorney General.

Leahy's appointment is effective at the close of Senate business Tuesday. McGrath is to be sworn into his new post on Wednesday. Leahy, a lawyer and tax expert, said in a statement that he had no intention of becoming a candidate for the seat in 1950.

Governor Pastore has been discussed in political circles as a candidate for the Senate next year.

In Washington, both McGrath and Senator Green (D., R. I.) praised the appointment of Leahy.

Both Senators rallied that Leahy had served in Rhode Island tax and finance posts when each was Governor of the State.

McGrath named Leahy State finance director during his term as Governor from 1940-1945. While Green was Governor in the mid-thirties. Leahy was named a member of the board of tax commissioners.

McGrath, who also is Democratic National Chairman, will resign that post Wednesday morning before taking the oath as Attorney General in the afternoon.

'Sure It's True,' Ball Says of Pay to Fight T-H Repeal

Afton, Minn., Aug. 22 (U.P.)—Former United States Senator Joseph H. Ball confirmed today that he received $3400 from a Washington attorney for lobbying work to oppose repeal of the Taft-Hartley labor law.

"Sure the story's true," Ball told a reporter who visited him at his summer farm home near this St. Paul suburb.

He said he had nothing to add to the published report that Gerard D. Reilly, Washington attorney, paid him the money. He said: "Gerry's told the whole story as far as I'm concerned."

Asked if he planned to do any more work of this type, Ball replied, "I haven't decided."

He said he and Mrs. Ball and their children will return to Washington in about two weeks.

Excise Tax Cut Out for 1949, Legislator Says

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Any lingering hope of excise tax cuts this year was officially buried on Captiol Hill yesterday.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the tax-originating House Ways and Means Committee issued a formal statement saying he saw "no probability" of a reduction now. He added:

"I believe it is important to make this clear now so that consumers will not postpone the purchase of goods subject to tax in the hope of an immediate reduction."

Heavy wartime excise taxes are still in effect on such things as furs, jewelry, luggage, cosmetics, telephone, telegraph and radio messages and on movie, bus, railroad and airplane tickets.

Travel Taxes May Go

Doughton said he thinks some excise taxes, such as those on communication and transportation services, can be reduced next year. But he coupled this with a statement that he wants a balanced budget and this probably would require raising other taxes.

He estimated the 1950 fiscal year, ending next June 30, may end with a deficit of "at least four, possibly five billion dollars or more under the present tax law." He said he favors reducing those taxes "which are crippling enterprise and interferring with business expansion" but he did not specify.

Doughton said he has ordered the staff of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation to begin a study "of possible tax revision and reduction measures." This would lead to a "well-balanced" tax bill next year instead of a "hurried catch-as-catch-can" measure this year.

George Favors Cutback

Meanwhile, Chairman Walter F. George of the Senate Finance Committee said that if the House committee can get a bill ready early next year his own committee might be able to finish work by April.

George, in an interview in U. S. News and World Report, said excise taxes should be cut back to prewar levels either at once or not later than "the early part of 1950."

The Senator also reiterated his earlier call for a cut in individual income taxes. He suggested raising the personal exemption, now $600 a person, as well as cutting tax rates in all brackets.

President Truman earlier said he was for a tax cut if George could find other revenue sources to make up the loss. This has been the point on which all talk of tax cuts has repeatedly foundered.

State's Righters Face Ousting Today, Say Pro-Trumanites

By the United Press

Pro-Truman forces claimed victory yesterday on the eve of a showdown fight over ousting State's Rights bolters as members of the Democratic National committee.

The showdown gets a trial run today when opposing forces make their arguments before the party's credentials committee.

The credentials committee has the first decision on which factions may sit in the national committee when it meets Wednesday to accept the resignation of Chairman J. Howard McGrath of Rhode Island and presumably elect William M. Boyle, jr., of Kansas City, as his successor.

Boyle, committee vice chairman and a close friend of President Truman, has no open opposition for the chairmanship.

The fight is over the question of ousting old members of the national committee who bolted the Truman ticket in the presidential election last year on the Negro rights issue.

Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi, South Carolina and Texas are involved.

Clarence E. Hood, pro-Truman leader in Mississippi, expressed confidence the credentials committee will give him and Mrs. John A. Clark the nod over John B. Snyder and Mrs. Hermes Gautier as national committee members from their State.

The Hood-Clark claim was based on the fact they were named by a pro-Truman meeting of Mississippi Democrats after the Mississippi delegation to the party's national convention last summer walked out in protest against the Truman nomination, and Snyder and Mrs. Gautier boycotted a national committee meeting the following day.

Byron Skelton, Temple, Tex., brought a three-member subcommittee of the Texas Democratic Executive Committee to present his claim to unseat National Committeeman Wright Morrow of Houston.

Gilbert Adams of Beaumont, subcommittee chairman, based the claim on a Texas State convention last September which voted to oust Morrow and elected Skelton in his stead.

"If Wright Morrow continues to serve as national committeeman he will not be national committeeman for the Democrats but will be representing those whose interests and political affections and philosophies embrace the Dixiecrat creed," Adams said.

Pro-Trumanites in South Carolina sought to solve their problem by electing Senator Burnet R. Maybank to replace Gov. J. Strom Thurmond, the State's Rights presidential candidate last November, as national committeeman.

The Maybank selection satisfied Ashton Williams, whom the national party headquarters has recognized as committeeman since last September.

But, there still was chance for a fight on whether Mrs. Anne A. Agnew of Columbia, or Mrs. J. Richard Allison of Columbia, should be recognized as committeewoman.

Dope Prescription Forgery Laid to Two

First Is Sentenced

Second Man Avows Guilt In Sex Deaths

Fort Wayne, Ind., Aug. 22 (AP).—A husky, 30-year-old farmhand today signed statements admitting three Fort Wayne sex slayings, two of which had been confessed by another man who is under sentence of death.

Click

Officers accepted the statements made by Franklin Click, a truck driver on a celery farm, but were skeptical.

Click's admission further complicated an already confused situation, for a third man has been convicted and sentenced to life imprisonment for a fourth sex killing confessed by the man under sentence to die.

The man awaiting execution is Ralph Lobaugh, 32-year-old former Kokomo factory worker. His execution had been set for next Friday but Gov. Henry F. Schricker granted him a 90-day reprieve last Saturday.

Serving life imprisonment for the same crime Lobaugh confessed is Robert V. Christen, 38, a former Fort Wayne drug clerk. He has an appeal pending.

Christen was convicted in the fatal beating of Mrs. Dorothea Howard, 30, wife of a soldier stationed at Baer Field, near Fort Wayne. Lobaugh, however, had admitted Mrs. Howard was one of his victims and it was for her death he was sentenced to die. The two other Lobaugh-confessed slayings in 1944 were Wilhelma Haaga, 58, and Anna Kuzeff, 19.

Click in his statements, Sheriff Harold S. Zeis said, took responsibility for the killings of Miss Haaga, Miss Kuzeff and Phyllis Conine, 16-year-old high school girl whose body was found in a cornfield south of Fort Wayne August 6, 1944.

Click is married and is the father of five children.

A physiotherapist and his beauty operator wife were arrested yesterday by the police narcotics squad an dheld under $1000 bond each on charge of forging narcotic prescriptions.

They are Cecil A. Sogren, 44, and his wife, Ada Lee Sogren, 49, of 623 Pennsylvania ave. se.

Routine checking on prescription files in drug stores brought about the arrest Detective Sergt. W. L. Taylor said. He said officers noticed similarities in prescriptions for dolophine, a synthetic drug which has the effect of morphine.

After obtaining a description of Sogren, Taylor went to the office of one of the doctors whose prescription blanks had been used. He found Sogren in a waiting room there. Taylor said Sogren and his wife admitted obtaining the prescriptions from a number of physicians, using false names and signing the false names. This, Taylor said, constituted the forgery. He said both admitted the forgery.

Sogren and his wife will go before United States Commissioner C. S. Lawrence at 10 a. m. today.

Raiders Find Women, No Vice at Forest Glen

Military authorities still are sniffing for signs of fire that may be behind the reports of marijuana smoking and other vice at the Forest Glen annex of Walter Reed Hospital.

A mass raid late Saturday on a noncommissioned officers club at the annex netted only a few whisky bottles, much publicity and some embarrassment.

But Col. John T. Cole, commanding officer of the military district of Washington, said last night: "In view of the serious nature of the charges made by confidential informants, we're still keeping a wary eye on the area."

"We're not sure yet whether it was a case of a false report or someone being tipped off about the impending raid."

Authorities had been told the club was a den of iniquity—a rendezvous for narcotics peddling, prostitution, bootlegging. Also that club funds were being siphoned into the wrong pockets.

One source said military authorities had planted investigators at the club and that "fairly good cases had been made recently against some individuals," in recent weeks.

Late Saturday, more than 50 Army and Montgomery County police swooped down on the club—to snare one half-empty fifth of whisky, several half pints, and a few small pen knives.

Two persons were questioned, then released after they had yielded "no information incriminating any one present."

Possession of the whisky would have been illegal but the owners were never traced, Colonel Cole pointed out. Several women present were said to have unsavory reputations known to local police. As to them, Colonel Cole said it would be a "post matter" to bar such characters from the military reservation. As to the knives, they were under 3 inches and so legal.

Colonel Cole said an audit of the club's books revealed they were off by only some $3.50.

Ungrateful Man Gets 90 Days in Theft

Herbert L. Gibson, 27, was sentenced yesterday to serve 90 days in jail for stealing from a waitress who had befriended him.

Sentence was imposed on Gibson by Judge Walter J. Casey of Municipal Court. The theft of some $200 in clothing and jewelry, according to police, was from Sarah E. Whitaker, 1417 Rhode Island ave. nw. She said that she had given Gibson a meal earlier at a restaurant when he came in and said he was broke.

Gibson was also charged with housebreaking, but this case was dismissed after Mrs. Whitaker first said that she was not very friendly with Gibson and then called him "Herbert" on the witness stand.

In dismissing the case, Assistant United States Attorney Martin J. McNamara said:

"She called him 'Herbert' and he called her 'Sarah.' But she also disclaimed familiarity with him.

This discrepancy led me to believe that I could not sustain a housebreaking charge."

Acquitted in Lottery

Boston, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Accused of hiding betting slips behind his foot-long beard, 72-year-old Aaron Zideman was acquitted of a lottery charge today when his lawyer argued the elderly man was a bettor—not a bookie.

Sailor Killed By Shot Fired In Family Row

A 20-year-old sailor died at the Patuxent River Naval Air Station dispensary last night of a bullet wound in his head, which police said was self-inflicted following a family argument.

He is Harvey C. Swilley, air controlman third class.

The shooting occurred at 4 p. m. in the Lexington Park Dormitory, the local hotel, where Swilley's wife, Bertie, and 2-year-old son live. Patuxent authorlies launched an investigation, but said the shooting resulted from a family argument.

Swilley has been at Patuxent for almost two years. He is a native of Tampa, Fla., and enlisted in the Navy in 1945.

Air station security police said Mrs. Swilley gave them this account of what happened:

Her husband came to the room and an argument developed, during which divorce proceedings were mentioned and Swilley tried to get her to come back to him.

Finally "certain threats, apparently were made," police said, and Mrs. Swilley ran out of the room. At this point the security police, called by the dormitory manager, who had been alarmed by Swilley's despondent attitude when he entered the building, were coming down the corridor.

A shot was heard. Police rushed in to find Swilley's crumpled body, a .38 caliber revolver beside him.

He died at the dispensary at 6:26 p. m. Mrs. Swilley, uninjured but in a state of shock, was also taken to the dispensary, where she was released after treatment.

The air station naval officer investigating the case said he understood the Swilleys had been separated "off and on" for two years.

Lonely Hearts Killers to Die In October

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Two convicted lonely hearts killers stood mute today as they were condemned to die in Sing Sing Prison's electric chair during the week beginning October 10.

Mrs. Martha Beck, 29, and Raymond Fernandez, 34, were calm as Supreme Court Justice Ferdinand Pecora read the sentence.

Mrs. Beck attempted a smile, but it developed into more of a sneer. Fernandez smiled to his 200-pound sweetheart as he walked away from the bench and said something which court attaches said was so low that even she did not hear.

Three killings were charged against the defendants, two in Michigan, where they were arrested, and one in Valley Stream, N. Y., for which they were tried here. The State charged all three resulted from a lonely hearts scheme of Fernandez and Mrs. Beck to bilk women through mail romances.

In Michigan they were charged with the killing of Mrs. Delphine Downing, 24, a widow, and her infant daughter, Rainelle.

During questioning in those two deaths, the defendants made statements involving themselves in the killing last January 4 of Mrs. Janet Fay, 66, Albany, N. Y., widow at Valley Stream. They were brought here for trial first because Michigan does not have capital punishment.

Wife-Slayer, Freed After 11 Years, Repeats on No. 2

Detroit, Aug. 22 (AP).—Michigan justice made up to Bernard Niedzialkowski for an improper trial in the slaying of his wife. He was freed after 11 years in prison.

Then the 37-year-old former lifer married again.

Today he is held on a charge of shooting his second wife to death. Sergt. Armand Meneghel said Niedzialkowski borrowed a shotgun from his father to do it—just as in the previous killing.

The victim, Mrs. Madeline Patricia Koszyk, 23, was killed Saturday as she sat in a bar with Tony Koszyk, 34, who showed police a marriage license issued in 1947.

Niedzialkowski told police he married her in 1948 as he set out to begin life anew.

10 Firemen's Severe Headaches Thought Due to Burned TV Set

Throbbing headaches and great thirst suffered by Arlington County firemen after subduing a blaze August 11 may have been due to beryllium phosphers released when a television set was burned in the blaze.

Arlington Fire Chief A. C. Scheffel revealed yesterday that he has written to the National Board of Fire Underwriters to investigate this probability.

Two firemen who fought the blaze at the frame house, 1416 N. Quinn st., Arlington, were treated at Arlington Hospital for what was then thought to be effects of smoke. The same day these two and some eight other firemen who had been inside the burning house experienced pulsating headaches and extreme thirst.

Chief Scheffel said his suspicions were aroused when he read an article about the dangerous inner coating of television tubes and also learned there had been a television set in the Quinn st. home.

The article, in the magazine Blazes, published by manufacturers of fire-fighting equipment, stated that "poisoning may result from inhalation of beryllium phospher coating on the interior of (television) tubes or from cuts on the hand." It advised that broken tubes should be immersed in water and wrapped carefully before being discarded.

Major manufacturers of fluorescent lights have agreed to cease using beryllium phosphor in their products because of the poison danger, it was announced in May by United States Surgeon General Dr. Leonard A. Scheele.

An article in the September issue of Reader's Digest reports that some cathode-ray tubes in television sets contain beryllium. It warned that such tubes, when broken, should be handled with care.

Record Tells Of Raft Party

Los Angeles, Aug. 22 (AP).—Parties for Nickey Cohen and his cohorts at the home of George Raft are discussed in a new series of transcriptions police released today and identified as having been taken from a microphone secreted in Cohen's home.

There was nothing to indicate whether the Raft mentioned is the movie actor of the same name.

"Mickey and Neddie Herbert and a couple of other fellows were out at George Raft's last night," Mickey's wife is quoted in the transcription. "They had a grand dinner and the boys enjoyed themselves very much. They really have a grand time when they go out there and think nothing of staying out all night. I never know when to expect Mickey when he goes out there."

Herbert was fatally wounded when Cohen's party was ambushed presumably by rival gangsters July 20.

3 Are Indicted For Murder in First Degree

Three men were charged yesterday with first-degree murder in separate indictments returned by the District grand jury.

They are:

Curtis H. Shoemaker, 41, of 2520 14th st. nw., a Times-Herald credit clerk; Clarence Booth Reynolds, 42, of 2804 Myrtle ave. ne., former business agent of the Iron Workers Local No. 5, and George R. Burn, 32, of 59 I st. nw., an unemployed oil burner serviceman.

Shoemaker is charged with firing six shots from a .38-caliber revolver at Francis K. (Scar) Arnold, 33, of 1444 Harvard st. nw. on July 16.

The defendant told police Arnold had been "belittling me over women." The two men and a woman had been together earlier in the evening at a foodshop and gone to Shoemaker's apartment. There an argument ensued, and later the trio went out in front of the building.

Weapon Reloaded

Four of the shots took effect, with bullets landing under Arnold's left eye, in the neck, shoulder, and arm. Police said Shoemaker had reloaded his weapon when arrested shortly after the slaying.

Reynolds was indicted for the fatal shooting of Vance Bowling, 50, of 1838 3rd st. ne., also an ironworker union member. Reynolds maintained that Bowling had a grudge against him over differences in employment practices.

The two of them had been drinking earlier in the evening, Reynolds said, and a fight started at 10th and D sts. nw., between the two men. Reynolds, according to court papers, remembers getting his pistol and going to Bowling's residence, but does not remember what followed.

According to police, Mrs. Clara G. Norcross, 37, the landlady, saw him at the Bowling residence and he told her his mission was to kill Bowling. Police said Mrs. Norcross told them she told him that killing was wrong and offered to read the Bible to him.

He rushed for the room where her baby was sleeping, Mrs. Norcross said, and she fled with the child. It was shortly thereafter that Bowling was found dying.

The third murder defendant, Burn, according to the charge, came into the basement room of Harry M. Mauz, 47, also of 59 I st. nw., on July 6. Burn had been drinking and was dressed only in his shorts, with a belt with a pistol and holster. He threatened there in front of witnesses, according to police, to shoot Mauz and did so.

Lost Boy Feared Bear Victim

Aitkin, Minn., Aug. 22 (U.P.).—National guardsmen joined more than 700 volunteers searching a swampy, bear-infested woodland in northern Minnesota today for a 3-year-old boy missing since Saturday.

Bloodhounds led groups of men through mucky forest thickets for a sign of Larry Coleman, who vanished when gathering pine cones with a brother and sister.

One hound picked up a trail near McGregor, Minn., which searchers said "might be promising."

Sheriff Hjalma Hulin feared Larry may have drowned or been the victim of bears.

Hungry bears have been moving out of the forests to plague northern Minnesota communities all summer. At least 50 bears have been shot at Duluth and Two Harbors, northeast of here.

The search was the second big hunt for a missing child in 48 hours. Saturday a party of 700 found the body of 20-month-old Rebecca Harris near Angora, Minn., after a day's hunt through heavy timber. She had drowned in a small stream.

Larry, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Coleman; his sister, Barbara, 9, and brother, Wayne, 7, were visiting the farm of their grandparents near Boot Lake.

Saturday the children went to the woods to gather pine cones, but only Barbara and Wayne returned. The parents started a fruitless search, then called in authorities.

Clark Is Expected To Succeed Devers

Gen. Mark Clark, commander of the Sixth Army, will succeed Gen. Jacob L. Devers as commander of the Army Field Forces, a reliable source said yesterday.

Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, now director of plans and operations, Department of the Army, will replace Clark in San Francisco, it was said.

Devers will retire for age the end of September. His headquarters are at Ft. Monroe, Va.

Clark Urges Equality In the Reserves

Camp Pendleton, Calif., Aug. 22 (AP).—The U. S. Sixth Army's Gen. Mark Clark today declared for equality of enlisted men and officers in the armed forces' reserves.

"Enlisted reservists of today," he said, "will be the company level officers of the next war." He said they should share housing, messing and training facilities with officers and mingle socially "with civilian clothes preferred over uniform."

ence in the Quartermaster Corps.

Committee officials said yesterday that they had documentary evidence that General Feldman sent Hunt a prospectus of the Quartermaster Corps' procurement plans for clothing and equipage for the fiscal year of 1948, together with a covering letter.

Before General Feldman is called as a witness, the investigators will hear the testimony of Brig. Gen. A. D. Hopping, chief of the Quartermaster Corps Supply Division, and Pierre Welch, a businessman of this city.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, White House military aide, will not be called until Thursday or later, it appeared yesterday. He volunteered to testify more than two weeks ago, before the public hearings began.

General Vaughan's names has cropped up in testimony from the very outset, largely because of his association with Hunt and John Maragon. Senators on the subcommittee want to ask him about testimony they have heard dealing with deep-freeze units, a race track and molasses.

Those who know General Vaughan would not be surprised to see him move from the defensive to the offensive once he has taken the witness stand.

He will go to Capitol Hill fortified by President Truman's oft-spoken professions of faith in him. Mr. Truman, in his sensational "S. O. B." speech in defense of General Vaughan on the night of February 22, said that he was an "able and efficient military aide."

At a White House news conference August 11, the President told reporters that his attitude toward Vaughan had not been changed in the slightest. At his last news conference, he asked reporters and their editors to suspend judgment on General Vaughan until he has had a chance to speak for himself.

Senator McCarthy (R., Wis.), a member of the investigating subcommittee, said yesterday that General Vaughan "will be given every consideration, but will be asked an awful lot of questions."

Senator Hoey (D., N. C.), chairman of the subcommittee, announced the details of a bill he plans to introduce after the hearings are completed. Under its terms, he said, nobody could get by with the deception that he was merely trying to do a favor for friends seeking Government contracts.

Every company seeking a contract, under the proposed Hoey bill, would be required to register the names of all persons it has hired to assist it in dealing with Government agencies. Additionally, any counselor would be required to register with the Government department he deals with on any business matter.

This, the North Carolinian said, would put Government departments on notice that certain men were operating as employes rather than friends.

He said he saw nothing illegal with the efforts of management counselors or lawyers to help business firms so long as no improper influence was used on Government agencies. His plan, he added, should bring the practice more into the open.

Declares B-36 Is Great Weapon

GEN. CARL SPAATZ
Calls it force for peace . . .

Probers May Skip Review

vention but would return this morning.

There was active discussion yesterday—out of the hearing room—of suggestions the probe be wound up shortly.

Representative Overton Brooks (D., La.) said "there is considerable sentiment" against having the committee go into any comprehensive evaluation of strategic bombing, the wisdom of the decision to cancel the Navy's supercarrier and other such military policy questions.

"We'd me usurping the job of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Weapons System Evaluation Group," said Representative Mel Price (D., Ill.).

Gen. H. H. (Hap) Arnold, retired Air Force chief, last week advised against Congress getting into such problems and Gen. Carl Spaatz backed up his stand yesterday. But top Navy admirals and some Army chiefs believe the question of possible overemphasis on strategic bombing is a vital subject for congressional study.

Representative Lansdale Sasscer (D., Md.) takes this view. He said that the investigation had turned up nothing to indicate bad faith on the part of anyone in the B-36 program and he saw no need to take more "cumulative" testimony on this score.

Wants Halsey Called

"But in view of the fact we have taken considerable testimony directed to the concept that we should gear our defenses to an intercontinental bomber program, I think we should hear from some Navy witnesses on this point," he said. "Admiral Halsey, particularly, ought to be called."

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, commander in chief of the Pacific Fleet, has been sitting in on the hearings at the request of the chairman. He has been slated as a rebuttal witness to Air Force claims the B-36 can't be stopped.

General Spaatz, Gen. Joseph T. McNarney, former chief of the Air Material Command; Gen. Muir Fairchild, vice chief of USAF staff, and Lieut. Gen. Howard A. Craig, deputy chief of staff for material, were heard by the committee yesterday.

On Performance Alone

They backed fully the testimony of other witnesses that no political or other pressure was involved in B-36 procurement and that the greatly improved performance of the plane was solely responsible for the large additional orders placed early this year.

Spaatz took a different view than Gen. George C. Kenney of the role of the B-36. Kenney had said he would use it only as a night bomber because it is too vulnerable in daylight. By attacking during both day and night, enemy defense forces — radar, fighters and antiaricraft—either would have to be doubled or get worn out by being on a 24-hour alert, Spaatz declared.

He also outlined his views on the difficulties of shooting down B-36 formations: the vast area of Russia and the many avenues of approaches; the extensive radar system required to give warning; and doubt that fighters could "fight a very good battle" against the heavily armed B-36.

Under questioning, Spaatz said that even if fighters are capable of shooting down the big plane, it still should be used as an A-bomb carrier. Some losses had to be taken in bombing Germany to push through our attacks, he pointed out.

The retired general declared that the charges against the B-36 had done "great disservice" by forcing the Air Force to reveal performance secrets to justify it.

Voorhees Gets Army Oath; Off for Tokyo

Tracy S. Voorhees was sworn in as Undersecretary of the Army yesterday as he prepared to leave for Tokyo, where he will confer with Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his Far Eastern experts during the next two weeks.

Archibald S. Alexander, of Bernardsville, N. J., unsuccessful Democratic candidate for United States Senator from New Jersey last November was sworn in to succeed him as Assistant Secretary of the Army. Secretary of the Army Gordon Gray administered the oaths.

Voorhees, who had been an Assistant Secretary in charge of occupied areas, was congratulated by Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson on the "magnificent job" he has been doing.

Voorhees will leave for Japan today. He and MacArthur are expected to review the entire problem of military strategy in the Far East, with particular emphasis on possible steps for confining the further spread of communism.

Spaatz Warns On Plane Cut

70 to a 48 group program, with its emphasis on strategic bombing, left the Air Force "unbalanced."

"When I left the Air Force," he said, "It was properly balanced under the 70-group force. When you go down to 48 groups, I hesitate to say whether it has proper balance."

Declaring that 48 groups are "inadequate," he added that "you certainly can't put as much emphasis on tactical aviation" as you want with such a force. The problem "seems to have been met" the best way possible by stressing strategic air, Spaatz said.

"We are imperiling the security of the Nation by providing only 48 groups?" asked Vinson.

"Yes, sir," replied Spaatz.

Vinson commented that "we'll have another shot at voting the additional 800 millions." He said he had talked to the members of the House Armed Services Appropriations Subcommittee and they will support the new drive for a large air force.

"Enemies Just Waiting"

Spaatz said it would be "very dangerous" to cut back to 48 groups because some of "our friends in Europe" have been making certain plans "on the basis of our having a 70-group force." Then he added:

"Our potential enemies are just waiting until we are weak enough to hit us."

Representative Porter Hardy, jr. (D., Va.) asked Spaatz if he considered it "would be safe" to achieve a 70-group Air Force "at the expense of the Army and Navy."

"I know what I would do if I were a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff," he replied. "But I'd rather not answer that question."

Strike Hurt

Exports Hit 9-Month Low In Britain

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Britain's exports slumped in July to the lowest of any month since October.

Reporting today, the Board of Trade laid part of the blame on a Communist-led, 25-day strike by London dockers.

The board said the value of exports during the month was $566,800,000, compared with $572,800,000 in June and $605,600,000 in May.

Imports totaled $728,800,000, leaving the Nation with a 162 million dollars unfavorable trade balance.

The board said the vital exports to America, main source of the dollars Britain must have to buy food and raw materials, were up sharply.

It figured the United States bought $15,200,000 worth of British goods during the month. Sales to the United States in June were only 12 million dollars.

Automobiles were hardest hit by the export slump. Vehicle exports totaled $90,880,000, down $8,400,00 from the April to June average.

Hundreds of cars piled up on the docks during the stevedore strike.

Berlin, Aug. 22. (AP).—A German Communist faction formed a new party today and quickly leagued itself with Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito "to fight the imperialist bolshevism" of Russia.

Its leaders said they already were collecting guns to resist arrest by Russian forces in eastern Germany if necessary.

The chief spokesman and co-leader, 41-year-old Karl-Heinz Scholz, claimed his Free Communist Party (FKP) has a growing membership now counted at 4000 in the Soviet sector of Berlin and 600 in the western sectors.

Scholz said a well-organized underground operation is spying on the Russians and smuggling weapons for the party.

Scholz, a wartime anti-Nazi underground fighter who had been imprisoned four years as a Reichstag fire suspect in the 1930's, lives in the French sector behind steel doors and barred windows which make a fortress of his third-floor flat.

Soviet sector authorities have put a price of 10,000 Eastmarks (about $700) on his head. By profession he is an engineer.

The other leader elected at the FKP's organization meeting is Paul Szymanski, a head man in the Socialist Unity (SED) Party formed in 1946 by a Soviet-dictated merger of Communists and Socialists.

They said the FKP is laid out on the pattern of the original German Communist Party of the early 1920's. It began publishing today a semiweekly newspaper Die Rote Rahne (The Red Flag), using the name of the Communist organ circulated in the days of the Weimar Republic.

FKP joined Tito's anti-Cominform feud with the Kremlin by sending a telegram to Belgrade carrying assurances of sympathy and support.

"We are Communists, always have been Communists and always will be Communists," Scholz said in proclaiming the new party.

Against Red Imperialism

"We have formed to fight imperialist bolshevism. The so-called internationalism of Soviet Russia is a fraud. We reject any plans for dictatorship of the people because it inevitably becomes a dictatorship over the people," Scholz said.

"We are expanding all the time," he declared. "Soon the party will have branches in all the western zones."

Western zone authorities, however, have refused to license the FKP as a political party. The Socialist Unity Party calls it an outlaw organization.

The platform adopted by FKP contains five points:

1. A peace treaty for all Germany.

2. Return to Germany of the Saar and parts of Germany given to Poland and abolition of international control over the Ruhr.

3. Put all German industries into the hands of workers' cooperatives without state ownership.

4. Abolish all Russian zone concentration camps and release all German prisoners of war.

5. Establish a democratic republic for all Germany based on the federal system (as the newly formed wes German government is organized).

Germans Told To Plant Food

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Marshall Plan Administrator Paul Hoffman told Germans today they should plant "less flowers and more food."

Hoffman, here during his fact-finding tour of nations receiving European Recovery Administration funds, said Germans ought to pay more attention to manning the factories still standing than shouting complaints about the relatively small number being dismantled.

When a German reporter asked him about plant dismantling he snapped: "Bury it!"

Then he suggested "victory gardens" for the Germans, saying, "I would say as long as a country needs food desperately, they should grow less flowers and more food."

Hoffman said every nation participating in the Marshall Plan has made "real progress along domestic lines. Every country has made greater progress toward fiscal stability."

He warned it would be "a great disappointment" for Congress and the American people "if European nations fail to fulfill the pledges they gave when they got the (Marshall Plan) aid."

Reds Foiled In Austrian Kidnap Try

Vienna, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—British military police today forcibly removed an Austrian civilian from the hands of four armed Soviet soldiers after an angry crowd of 1000 Austrians threw stones at the Russians and blocked their alleged kidnap attempt.

British authorities said the man, Carl Sonderman, was removed from a closed jeep with Soviet markings in which four Russians were sitting, one in the uniform of a colonel.

British officials and the Austrian Ministry of Interior said Sonderman broke a window in the back of the closed jeep and tried to escape when the Russians stopped near the boundary of the British and Soviet sectors of Vienna to ask directions.

The Russians climbed from the car and seized him and eyewitnesses said they beat him on the head with a pistol and threw him into the car.

Austrian trucks and private cars hemmed in the jeep and prevented it from moving. The crowd started to stone the jeep and demanded the release of Sonderman, who was shouting for help and screaming that he was being kidnaped.

An unarmed battalion of British military police, which had been on a route march, arrived and formed a cordon around the jeep.

The British provost marshal asked the Soviets to permit ambulance attendants to attend Sonderman, who bled freely from his head injuries. The Russians refused.

Meanwhile, a company of helmeted East Yorkshire infantry in battle kit arrived and put a stronger cordon around the jeep. In the confusion, an Austrian crept under the Soviet jeep and slashed all four tires.

The British provost marshal walked over to the jeep and dragged out Sonderman, who lost his pants in the struggle.

Sonderman, 34, a doctor of political science, was taken to an Austrian hospital, where it was said his injuries were not serious. He later was removed to a British hospital.

2 U. S. Youths 'Held by Reds'

Frankfurt, Germany, Aug. 22 (AP).—The United States Army said today two Americans youths who disappeared recently on a bicycle tour in Germany were reported arrested by Soviet zone police. A German was quoted as the informant.

The two are Warren Oelsner, 20, of Oyster Bay, N. Y., and Peter Sellers, 18, of Philadelphia.

The Army has been searching for the youths at the request of John J. McCloy, United States Military Governor.

Bank Studies Moderate Loan to Tito

Paris, Aug. 22 (AP).—Eugene Black, jr., president of the World Bank, said today the bank is considering a "much more modest" loan to Yugoslavia than the 250 million dollars she has asked.

(Belgrade dispatches have reported the figure to be 280 million dollars.)

Black explained that 250 million dollars is "the sum of a number of projects" that the Yugoslavs would like to have the bank finance. He did not specify what the projects are.

Black is on a week's trip to France and England, he said, to go over matters to be discussed when the bank's governors meet in Washington September 13. French Finance Minister Maurice Petsche will be in the chair. Black had a talk with Petsche here today.

Albania Asks Tito to Stop Violations

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Albania charged today Yugoslavia violated her frontier four times in one week and Yugoslav soldiers once fired on an Albanian patrol on its home ground.

The Albanian Telegraph Agency, in a broadcast, said Albania's foreign ministry had given Yugoslavia a note protesting such "acts of provocation" on the little country's northern border.

Yugoslavia several times has charged Albania with frontier violations. Albania has denied the charges.

The new Albanian note asked Yugoslavia to end "all these hostile acts waged with deliberate ends in view by Yugoslav authorities."

Soviet Marshal Puts Traitor Tag on Tito

Bucharest, Romania, Aug. 22 (AP).—A Soviet marshal and a Romanian Vice Premier joined today in publicly charging Premier Marshal Tito with being a "traitor" and "plotting to set ablaze the Balkan powder keg."

Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, one of the Soviet Union's top military men and a member of the Politburo, assailed Tito as "traitor who has become the most bitter enemy of the Soviet Union and the people's democracies."

Vice Premier Gheorghe Gheorghiu-dej, a leader in the Romanian Communist Party, accused Tito and Vice Premier Constantin Tsaldaris of Greece with plotting to start war in the Balkans. The Communists spoke at an open rally attended by some 8000 "select" Romanian Communists.

The Communists had gathered on the eve of the fifth anniversary of Romania's liberation. Voroshilov came here as head of the Soviet delegation to the anniversary celebration.

Voroshilov charged Tito was trying to liquidate socialism in Yugoslavia and attempting to "restore fascism." He also accused Tito of secretly negotiating with the Western powers "behind the backs of the Soviet Union and the peoples' democracies."

He added "but the Yugoslav people, who know their true friends, will know how to prevent this."

Tito Clique Faces Fate Of Traitors, Pravda Says

Moscow, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda published today a dispatch asserting that the "Tito clique" in Yugoslavia faced the fate of Albanian "traitors" who were recently executed.

The article reviewed the trial and execution of Albanian Gen. Kochi Xoxe and others.

"However much the bourgeois nationalist band of Tito, Rankovic and Djilas rage and storm in Belgrade, whatever satanic methods they employ, they like Kochi Xoxe sooner or later must stand trial before the people and pay with their heads for the crimes they have committed against the camp of socialism and proletarian internationalism," the Pravda article said.

The others referred to are Yugoslav Vice Premier and Interior Minister Gen. Alexander Rankovic and Minister Without Portfolio Milovan Mjilas.

Joint Rights Bill Studied For 12 Nations

Strasbourg, France, Aug. 22 (AP).—A committee of the European Consultative Assembly proposed today that the 12 member nations join in a collective guarantee of human rights.

The action was announced by the chairman of the Human Rights Committee, Sir David Maxwell-Fyfe, British prosecutor at the Nurnberg war crimes trial.

The assembly will vote on the committee resolution within the next two weeks.

Sir David said the committee will meet again Thursday and will discuss two methods proposed for framing a collective guarantee of human rights. These were:

1. To combine the laws of each country into a carefully defined European bill of rights.

2. To accept, for the time being, human rights laws as they stand on the books of member nations and ask the members to guarantee they will be enforced. A commission, meanwhile, would try to work out a bill of rights acceptable everywhere.

Right Wingers Tell German Coalition Plans

Bonn, Germany, Aug. 22 (AP).—Plans for a coalition of three conservative and right-wing parties to form west Germany's first federal government were announced here today.

Negotiations between the three parties will begin soon, according to a news conference announcement by Dr. Fritz Oellers, chairman of the Free Democratic Party in Schleswig-Holstein.

Dr. Oellers said the negotiating parties will be the Christian Democrats, a conservative party which led all others in the August 14 parliamentary election; the rightist Free Democrats, which ranked third, and the extreme right-wing German Party, which ranked fourth. All are anti-Socialist.

Together they could muster a six-vote majority in the parliament, with 208 out of 402 seats.

State Dept. to Take Over In Germany Sept. 15

The State Department emphasized yesterday it will take over the occupation of western Germany on or about September 15.

Lincoln White, State Department press officer, made the statement at a news conference to clarify "misunderstandings" which he said have given the date as October 15 and November 15.

White said the department has been informed by John J. McCloy, U. S. high commissioner for Germany, that his civilian organization will replace the military government establishment as soon as the West German republic is proclaimed. This is expected about September 15.

Kennan Sees Peace Distant in Far East

By the United Press

George F. Kennan, the State Department's top policy planner, last night called the Communist conquests in China a catastrophe which will make real peace in the Far East impossible for a long time.

Meanwhile, he said, the United States must guard not only its own interests in the Far East but 'interests of international peace, as best we can."

He said the Chinese situation may call for "new approaches and techniques." But he gave no indication the Administration plans to change in the near future from its "wait-and-see" policy.

Kennan and Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson spoke on the first of five broadcasts over a Nation-wide radio network to review the national defense situation. Other top Government ocials will make addresses the next four nights.

Keenan said an attack of "unprecedented cynicism and intensity" is being waged against the peace and happiness of peoples throughout the world. He said the sharpest edge of the attack is being directed against the United States because it is the bulwark of the free world.

He said that the assailant, obviously Russia, knew that "our own self-confidence, and the confidence of others in us, must be broken before it would be safe to attack the free world anywhere." He added that the world situation demands that there "be no relaxation of the vigilance and energy with which the foreign affairs of this Government must be conducted."

Johnson said that building up the military strength of western Europe nations should make the United States invincible but that "their facilities, were they to fall into enemy hands, would make that enemy hard to beat."

Johnson Pledges Efficiency

Johnson promised to use the powers given him in the recently enacted law tightening unification to effect "greater efficiency" and the "maximum national defense for every dollar invested."

Appealing for still greater unification of the armed forces, he warned that neither of the three branches can win a war alone or even "get all the money" it may feel it needs.

He said the need for economy in military spending, as well as a demand for greater efficiency, has been one of the "vital urges" for further unification.

"In the past," he said, "a solvent economy in which our citizens have had full financial confidence has proved one of our greatest military assets. We can remain solvent only if we don't impose too heavy a tax burden on our economy."

Recapture Of Sinhwa Is Claimed

Canton, China, Aug. 22 (AP).—Counterattacking Nationalists reported fresh gains on both flanks of the rail route to Canton today, prolonging this city's life-expectancy as the provisional capital of China.

Gen. Chang Yi-ting, Nationalist army spokesman, announced recapture from the Communists of Sinhwa, 340 miles northwest of Canton and 95 miles northwest of the important rail junction of Hengyang.

On the east side of the railway that leads south from Hengyang to Canton, he announced the Nationalists were striking toward Yuhsien, 270 miles north of Canton.

The Central China commander, Gen. Pai Chung-hsi, was visibly elated as he flew to Canton today to confer with Premier Yen Hsi-Shan. As a gift to the Canton zoo, he brought along a live tiger that his troops had caught north of Hengyang.

The army spokesman said there was no change on the front 170 miles northeast of Canton, where the Reds have made their nearest approach to this city.

On the distant northwestern front in Kansu province, he reported heavy clashes on the outskirts of Lanchow, provincial capital.

The Defense Minister said the defenders had wiped out two Communist divisions on the southern outskirts of Lanchow and that Red attackers had been thrown back on the east.

Chile Drives On Merchants

Santiago, Chile, Aug. 22 (U.P.). The Chilean government today followed up its victory over Communist-led labor disorders with a sweeping campaign against merchants guilty of price and labeling violations.

The National Supply Administration "cracked down" on 345 local shops, closing 159 for periods ranging from 2 to 20 days for violations of price, weight and quality regulations, and ordered lesser penalties for 186 merchants caught evading price controls.

The country was quiet today after a week of riots and strikes, allegedly organized by the Communists as a prelude to revolution. A government announcement said the threat of a "revolutionary general strike" was "disappearing little by little."

The bureau of investigation said capturel documents and radio equipment indicated the disorders were part of an international Communist plot.

For Your Information

To carry out findings of an Emergency Board appointed by the President of the United States under the National Railway Labor Act, the nation's railroads necessarily agreed with the Non-Operating Railway Labor Unions to establish a 5-day-40-hour work week effective September 1, 1949.

This will require the closing on Saturdays and Sundays of many freight stations and offices heretofore open to the public—on the Southern as well as on all other railroads throughout the country—so that employees generally may be given two consecutive days off each week. Under the settlement, the employees will receive for five days' work the equivalent of wages formerly paid for six days' work.

President Truman's Emergency Board points out that the shorter work week is in keeping with the increasing trend in industry, banking and business generally.

For the railroad industry, which must keep the trains running day and night every day in the week, the change will create many difficult problems. The Southern, with your whole-hearted co-operation and sympathetic understanding, pledges to make the changeover with the least possible inconvenience to the public.

SUPPOSE they all went on vacation at the same time...

By NORMAN COUSINS

SUPPOSE, one of these summer days, that everyone holding a vital government job decided to go on vacation at the same time. Not merely high officials in Washington like the President and Supreme Court Justices and members of Congress, but people like policemen and firemen in our own communities.

What would happen if, suddenly, they all took off on a holiday?

The answer is easy. It couldn't happen. We wouldn't permit it to happen. We don't regard the work of government as a part-time convenience, something to be dispensed with at the pleasure of the office-holder.

We know that the absence of government means anarchy. We know that most people are honest, yet we maintain a police force and criminal courts because we know that society must protect itself against the few people who are not. We know that most people are reasonable and ought to be able to settle their differences among themselves, yet we maintain civil courts because it puts too much of a strain upon human nature to expect a party to a dispute to see the other fellow's side as well as his own.

A community without law is unthinkable. And yet . . . as it concerns the world community . . . as it concerns the basic issues in the world today, affecting the life and welfare of every individual . . . we try to get by without government. There is no government above nations, no government with power to prevent war . . . no laws, no courts, no machinery to prevent or punish violations.

Civilization has converted the earth into a single community geographically, crowding the many differences and antagonisms of nations and peoples into one neighborhood. All the pressures and problems and tensions which in the past have exploded into violence and war have been multiplied and magnified. And that neighborhood today is a combustible place. There is no corner of it that can't be scorched and leveled into war. There is no screen that can filter out the cosmic daggers released by atomic warfare. There is no place to hide.

The scientists tell us that no military defense can be devised against atomic attack. They tell us that other major nations, without any help whatsoever from the United States, are developing their own atomic weapons or worse. They tell us that the United States, because of its concentration of population and industry, is peculiarly vulnerable to atomic warfare.

Of course, there is a defense . . . a real defense, a sane defense. This defense is peace. Not a precarious peace dependent upon keeping ahead in the atomic armaments race. Not a cold peace of tensions, jitters, and sporadic incidents. Peace to be real must be built on something more than fear and accident. It must have a foundation of enforceable law, backed by justice and the machinery that makes justice possible. In short, world peace requires world government . . . with powers specifically limited to the making of peace and the keeping of peace.

The United Nations can be the framework of such a government. President Truman has said that the United Nations is America's first line of defense, but President Truman has also said that the United Nations lacks the strength and the authority it needs to deal with the central issues involved in keeping the peace.

The challenge today is to make the U. N. work. The challenge today is to strengthen the U. N. with the blood and bones it requires to save itself, and to save the world from the last of the great wars. The challenge today is to invest the U. N. with the effective powers of government.

The American people owe it to themselves and to the democratic traditions to take the leadership in working to build the United Nations into a world federation. We owe it to ourselves to define world government as the central objective in American foreign policy.

It may be that the leaders of one or more nations will attempt to resist that objective, or to blacken that ideal in the eyes of their peoples.

No matter. The preponderance of mankind will respond at once, and the rest in due course.

The question for Americans today . . . the question for all peoples today . . . is not whether they believe in world government. The question is whether they believe in government at all.

What You Can Do . . .

If you believe that the cause of peace is everyman's cause, and that every individual has a direct part in the making of the peace, just as he is directly affected by war itself;

If you believe that we as a nation should put at least as much into the attempt to avert war as we are putting into the attempt to win it if it should break out;

If you believe that world peace can best be achieved through world law;

If you believe that the United States should take the initiative in working for world law by proclaiming that world government is the central objective of American foreign policy;

Then . . .

You may want to find out about the United World Federalists, an organization of American citizens who want to strengthen the United Nations into a government with specific powers adequate to prevent war. For full information, write to United World Federalists, 7 East 12 Street, New York, New York.

Growing Suburbs

According to estimates just issued by the Census Bureau, the metropolitan area of Washington on July 1, 1948, had nearly 45 per cent more residents than it did in 1940. This growth compares respectably with something a California chamber of commerce might go into ecstasy about. People must like the climate here—or something. They keep on coming year after year and, except for some lapses, they keep on not going away.

At least, they like the suburbs of Washington. For by far the larger part of the increase has taken place outside the boundaries of the District. Arlington County's civilian population has more than doubled during the eight years. Fairfax County, including Falls Church, went up an estimated 92 per cent, and Alexandria 74 per cent, while Prince Georges and Montgomery Counties gained 56 and 53 per cent, respectively. Meanwhile, Washington itself in 1948 stood "only" 27 per cent above its 1940 civilian population.

As a matter of fact, it stood reasonably close to that figure for several years before 1948. By 1943 the increase over 1940 came to 25 per cent, with annual variations since then of one to two percentage points either way. The City of Washington, thus, seems to have reached at least a temporary plateau in its population growth, while the suburbs continue to spurt ahead. While in 1940 some 69 per cent of the metropolitan area's residents lived in the District, the ratio had dropped to 62 per cent in 1948.

We are inclined to view this trend with satisfaction rather than alarm. The number of people who actually live within the District's boundaries signifies nothing. Let those who think bigness as registered in a city's place in the list of biggest cities, is some kind of civic virtue, get excited if they insist. The general move to the suburbs is a healthy development, for individuals as well as for cities. This is a big country, and there is good reason why its inhabitants should spread out and enjoy it, instead of cooping themselves within the city walls.

Ship Subsidies

The rash charge of "browbeating" made by Chairman Fleming of the Maritime Commission in the ship subsidy investigation at the expense of the House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee is not likely to increase sympathy for the commission. General Fleming had little provocation. Actually the Hardy Subcommittee has gone out of its way to afford the Maritime Commission an opportunity to justify the construction subsidy practices vigorously criticized in a report by Comptroller General Lindsay Warren. The commission majority has not made a very effective answer to the implication in the report that the commission has been playing fast and loose with the Merchant Marine Act of 1936.

That act is designed to promote an American merchant fleet by authorizing subsidies to equalize American shipbuilding costs with foreign costs. A differential subsidy of 33 1/3 per cent is sanctioned in the law. The Comptroller General's report alleges that the Maritime Commission has not possessed the "convincing evidence" of greater cost differentials necessary to justify it in going above the 33 1/3 per cent subsidy limit. The report also charges in effect that the so-called national defense clause, under which the commission assumes the whole cost of military features approved by the Navy, has been used as a disguise to pay greater subsidies.

According to the Comptroller General's findings, no realistic basis has been set up for determining foreign costs. The report implies that assumptions as to foreign costs have been absurdly low so as to justify greater subsidies. Moreover, with respect to two ships on which a 45 per cent subsidy was approved, the commission disregarded evidence presented by the State Department's shipping adviser for northern Europe that the actual difference in present building costs is far less and that the approved subsidies will be difficult to explain abroad.

With respect to the newly authorized superliner, the United States, the irregularities seem to have been particularly flagrant. Including national defense features. The Maritime Commission will contribute some 60 per cent of the 70-million-dollar cost of this liner. It is significant that the vessel could not hope to attain the speed planned for it without the national defense "additions" amounting to more than one third of the total cost. Yet the contribution of the United States Lines, which will operate the vessel, was held close to the 25 million dollars which the company originally offered to pay. The Maritime Commission was energetically supported in this subterfuge by the Navy and Department of Defense. However, Commissioner Raymond S. McKeough, in a lucid bit of testimony, strongly criticized the departure from principle and indicated that he was viewing with increased skepticism his assent in five other ship contracts.

There is no question as to the need for an adequate merchant marine. But the commission seems to have adopted a doctrine that the end justifies the means. It seems to have gone out of its way, not merely to equalize conditions for American ship operators, but to give them positive advantage and remove a large element of risk. This practice has been described as "letting out the seams" of the Merchant Marine Act. If that act is now outdated, modifications ought to be made by Congress and not by the Maritime Commission.

Mundt Bill

What used to be called the Mundt-Nixon bill has had its face slightly washed and is now before the Senate Judiciary Committee under the sponsorship of Senators Mundt, Ferguson and Johnston. It remains in its essentials as objectionable and as repugnant to American traditions as when it was first spawned by the House Committee on Un-American Activities more than a year ago. Styled the "Subversive Activities Control Act, 1949," it is an outright sedition bill, comparable to nothing ever enacted by the Congress of the United States since the odious Sedition Act of 1798.

The Mundt bill would create a Subversive Activities Control Board with powers of life and death over minority political parties and voluntary associations of American citizens. It would be the function of this three-man board to determine whether any organization is a "Communist political organization" or a 'Communist front organization" as defined in the vague language of the bill and to determine whether any individual is a member of any group which it has designated a "Communist political organization."

Under the terms of the bill, Communist political organizations would be required to register with the Attorney General, disclosing the names of all their members; Communist front organizations would be required to register and make public the names of their officers. All material emanating from either, addressed to the public by mail or by radio, would have to be identified as coming from a Communist source. Members of Communist political organizations would be forbidden to hold any nonelective Government job or to secure a passport and, in addition, we surmise, would automatically become guilty by mere membership in the organization of a new crime established by the act—the crime of knowingly conspiring or agreeing "with any other person to perform any act which would substantially contribute to the establishment within the United States of a totalitarian dictatorship."

Thus, a governmental agency would, in effect, be authorized to tell American citizens what organizations they may join and what organizations they may not join. For the board's designation of an organization as Communist, while not actually outlawing it, would result either in destroying it outright or in so handicapping it as to render it impotent. And, of course, severe deprivations and penalties would be entailed by membership. A very apt observation was made about this not long ago by Prof. Zechariah Chafee, jr., of the Harvard Law School, the author of Free Speech in the United States, commonly acknowledged to be the definitive work in its field:

> By the American tradition, sifting bad parties from good parties is the job of the voters, and not the job of Congress or Government officials. We have had confidence that most of the voters would recognize a bad party when they saw it and keep away from it. The fate of the Know-Nothing Party, which incited prejudice against recent immigrants, and the failure of the Communist Party to win any important office anywhere or even a single presidential elector, show that this confidence in the voters is amply justified.

Apart from its dubious constitutionality and its indubitable violation of long-settled American principles, the Mundt bill is a stupid bill because it entirely misconceives the danger it is intended to meet. The danger does not lie in the propaganda of the Communist Party or of so-called Communist front organizations. There is a security danger in this country, but not a political danger, and the security danger most probably comes from agents who are not allowed to be formal Communists.

There is quite enough patriotism and good sense in the American people to cope with Communist propaganda. Error of opinion, however odious the opinion may seem, is not a danger to the United States unless it be translated into unlawful action. And there is abundant legislation already to deal with such action. The Mundt bill is aimed at opinion and expression. It would punish men, strictly on the doctrine of guilt by association, for their sympathies and their affiliations. It would strike, therefore, at the fundamental premises of American life—the premises that error of opinion may be tolerated where reason is left free to combat it and that the Government may never prescribe to a free people what is orthodox in social or political or religious belief.

Much Ado

The Senate's minority leader, Kenneth S. Wherry, seems bent upon opposing the approaching tripartite discussion of Britain's financial crisis even before it begins. He took occasion on Sunday to warn the Administration that any major agreements resulting from the American-Britain-Canadian conference to be held here September 6 would have to be approved by Congress. Apparently he supposes that the British are looking for a dollar loan. They are not, of course. Sir Stafford Cripps and Ernest Bevin are coming here, along with their Canadian opposite numbers, to take counsel with the American Secretaries of Treasury and State on a problem that has a great deal to do with the whole Atlantic community.

According to Senator Wherry, however, they are coming "in a desperate effort to tie the British economy to the United States." Such a tie-up is a reality, anyway. A better kind of tie-up is what, surely, we are all after—a world economy such as the United States has been trying to reestablish since the war ended. That is peacework. What we all did was to underestimate the difficulties of putting Humpty Dumpty together again after the battering he got during the war. To achieve this objective the United States became prime movers in a program for European recovery. This country's military no less than its economic security is involved in the maintenance of the stability not only of Britain but also of other countries in the free world. Senator Wherry, if he had the true interests of his country at heart, would paraphrase David Hume after the Napoleonic wars: "I pray for the continuing prosperity of all free countries."

The Treasury and State Departments have jointly announced that the purpose of the conference is to "discuss the balance of payments difficulties between the dollar and sterling areas and measures which could be taken to right the existing disequilibrium between the two areas, both in the long and short term." Basically, the problem is one of increasing British trade with the dollar area. It is not a problem that will be solved by sneering and chauvinistic attacks on Britain such as that indulged in by Senator Wherry. He predicts that Congress will reject any program agreed upon by the Administration that would "weaken our American economy and lower our standards of living." Let us hope so. But to do nothing and to ignore the conditions across the Atlantic would be to invite just these consequences. Perhaps, now that he has so ruthlessly demolished his straw man, Senator Wherry will find time to look at the real situation with some degree of composure.

Greek Rebels

It is reported that the policy of War Minister Kanellopoulos toward the rebels who are making what seems to be scattered last stands in Greece is one of tempering justice with mercy. That is to say, he is aiming at assimilation. He promises repatriation for most of the guerillas, legal trials of the leaders, and no reprisals against families. If Mr. Kanellopoulos' figures are correct, it is an evidence of good faith that out of 11,000 guerillas captured or surrendering this year, only 450 have been convicted. Mr. Kanellopoulos is a member of a supreme panel that reviews the sentences meted out by courts-martial and must approve the death penalties before they receive the formal authorization of the King. Whenever any reasonable doubt exists, he institutes a personal investigation of the case, and according to C. L. Sulzberger, writing in the New York Times, "it is virtually certain that if a five-man court-martial is split on deciding the death penalty, the sentence will be commuted." Meanwhile, some 160,000 refugees have felt sufficiently confident to return to their homes, thus aiding Greek agricultural production.

The problem remains of creating a stable economy that will eliminate the conditions making for disaffection. Some 145 million dollars in ECA funds were expended in Greece last year, and another 170 million is asked for this year. More than ever, the objective of American aid now must be to bring about internal stability and integrate Greece in a regional set-up. But success in this aim would be impossible without the kind of policy that Mr. Kanellopoulos has announced. Firmness is necessary, for the business of government is to govern; but when firmness spills over into brutality and mere revenge, then a regime simply creates the situation it is seeking to uproot. Past Greek governments have themselves made perhaps more Communists than they have killed.

MOON-RIDDEN

Face to the moon, he sleeps, the child Tide sleeps,
Moon in his eyes, the toddling infant lies
Till through his baby brain moon-fever seeps
And suddenly the child awakes and cries
Calling for playthings left along the beach:
Pebbles and shells and seaweed used that day
That lay discarded far beyond his reach
Where he had dropped them when he tired of play.

And though the old sea sings him lullabies
And rocks his trundle-bed and bolts the door,
Sadly she sees her moon-witched child arise,
Shatter the bolts and scamper to the shore
Where, running shakily along the sands,
He gathers up his toys with eager hands.

Partisan Appointments

Your editorial of July 27, "Mr. Murphy's Successor," was read into the Congressional Record by Representative Tollefson and so has finally reached me on the West Coast. Like yourselves, I regret that Presidents have felt it necessary to appoint to the Federal bench men exclusively of their own political persuasion. It is a sad commentary on our governmental system.

In one respect your editorial was misleading. You only went back to 1933 in your tabulation, thus giving the impression that partisan appointment was a phenomenon of Democratic regimes. The simple fact is that the custom dates from John Adams and his midnight judges and even our Presidents of strongest character and greatest stature have followed it. You may be interested in the following table of original appointments to the Federal bench (as distinguished from promotions within the judicial system. The latter are not significant, for a promotion leaves a new vacancy to be filled from the outside.)

President	Party	Dem.	Rep.	Ind.
Cleveland,	Democrat	35	0	2
Harrison,	Republican	3	26	0
McKinley,	Republican	1	22	0
T. Roosevelt,	Republican	2	69	1
Taft,	Republican	8	37
Wilson,	Democrat	71	1
Harding,	Republican	1	43
Coolidge,	Repualican	4	64
Hoover,	Republican	7	42

Even the occasional magnanimity seeming displayed by a Republican President disappears upon closer analysis. Federal District judges must be appointed from the States in which they are to sit. When a vacancy occurs in the solid South, a Republican President is hard pressed to find a Republican Senator to sponsor him. Thus, the above table indicates Mr. Taft as the most impartial of Presidents, but the fact is that with one exception, every Democrat which he appointed to the District bench was in the deep South.

The more you look at the record, the more disgusted you are, but the plague is on both houses.

Catholic Position

Correspondent Bruce Watson, writing on August 14 in defense of Bishop Oxnam's attack upon the Catholic Church, apparently is confusing the meaning of "authoritarian" and "totalitarian" which he uses synonymously, through use of quotations.

I think that in all fairness reader Watson might have mentioned that Paul Blanshard, from whose recent book a paragraph was quoted, wrote articles in the magazine The Nation which were considered so prejudiced that the public school authorities in New York City removed copies of The Nation from their school library shelves.

By way of suggesting a treatise relating to the Catholic position on government, one may find clear expressions of the relation between man and government to God in De Regimine Principum (Concerning the Governance of Rulers) written by the Angelic Doctor, St. Thomas Aquinas.

And further may I quote from De Ldicis (The Treaties on Political Government) by St. Roberto Bellarmino who, when writing on the nature of political power, stated: "First, political power considered in general, not descending in particular to monarchy, aristocracy, or democracy, comes directly from God alone; for this follows of necessity from the nature of man, since that nature comes from Him Who made it; besides, this power derives from the natural law, since, it does not depend upon the consent of men; for, willing or unwilling, they must be ruled over by some one, unless tney wish the human race to perish, which is against a primary instinct of nature."

Bellarmino says that there are two powers, civil and religious, independent of each other, and each in its own sphere deriving from God its right to rule. The Pope's authority comes from God immediately, by reason of Our Lord's Divine institution, that of the temporal ruler derives from God through the medium of the consent of the people by reason of God's original institution in creating human nature.

Immigrants And Jobs

There is hardly a day that the press does not tell some distressful story about unemployment and there is hardly an issue of the Congressional Record that does not carry the same story of complaint by some Senator or Congressman. Yet, some of these complaining public representatives are at the same time demanding that we further open our doors for immigration.

If we propose to take on the troubles of the world, it means, aside from anything else, that we will have to absorb the surplus population of such countries as Italy, where the Premier, about a year ago, said that they would have to export 200,000 a year. Instead of afflicting other nations with what they do not want, it would seem to be more consonant with decency not to encourage the improvident element to produce beyond the nation's and their capacity to take care of them.

Whatever may have been our needs before the machine age, no sane person can say that we need more people to produce what we need. Furthermore, no sane person can say that either some of our own people or the newcomers will not have to be added to the unemployed. This is nothing short of lunacy.

Behind The White Paper On China

The unwarranted attacks on the White Paper issued by the State Department on the Chinese question makes it necessary to bring into the picture more light than heat. In the year of 1946, a very informative book, Thunder Out of China, was written by Theodore H. White and Annalee Jacoby of the Chungking bureau for Time during the war years. Mr. White took three years of the Chinese language and served in China from January, 1939, through 1945. On page 115 of this book, the following factual statement is made:

"The American Army had to build its installations and bases by paying for them in Chinese currency. It could not buy its currency on the black market for 400, 600 or 800 to 1, but had to pay at the fixed rate—$1 United States for each $20 Chinese. As prices soared in China, so did the price of every purchase of the American Government, till finally the building of an air base was costing 40 million dollars United States, and the building of a bamboo latrine from $10,000 United States up.

"The Chinese government was accumulating ever larger funds of American dollars on deposit in its name in New York, while the American Army was receiving less for every purchase. . . . The extortionate exchange rate was known to every American GI in China, who felt that America was being swindled in the most scandalous and blatant fashion. Our men resented the huge outlay of funds, and the bitterness they brought back with them to America at the end of the war was much too high a price politically for the Chinese to pay for the dollar credits in New York."

On page 139, this factual statement appears:

"Corruption in the Chinese forces was a cancer at the heart that infected every limb. Almost to the close of the war each division and army was treated as independent. Each division commander received a certain amount of money, which he apportioned as he saw fit for medical expenses, salaries, vegetables and other items incidental to the conduct of a campaign.

"As the inflation ate like acid at accepted ethics, the officers found themselves perhaps better placed strategically for grafting than any other group in the country. A divisional commander received, say, money and supplies for 10,000 men, which his subordinates in turn distributed to the lower echelons. But a division that carried 10,000 men on its roster might actually have only 9000 men—or 7000 or 5000. The difference between the roster strength and the actual strength of any unit was the measure of how much a commander could pocket personally. Further, the less he fed the living, the greater his profit.

"Graft coursed from one end of the Chinese army to the other. Payrolls were padded; rice rolls were padded. The abuse became so flagrant that a general's graft was finally recognized as his right. Divisions in the Chinese armies were supposed to have approximately 10,000 men, but rarely did any division have more than 6000—and draft levies had to be fed into them constantly just to replace the sick and dying. By 1943 some divisions had as few as 2000 officers and men."

Our statesmen on Capitol Hill and others should remember that while the Chinese warlords were pocketing American money our boys were losing their lives flying "the hump" and carrying supplies and ammunition over the Burma rd. Now comes a protest from the leaders of what is left of Nationalist China against the issuance of the White Paper.

If their protestations have any value at all and if the demands of our leaders on the Hill are to be satisfied, it seems to me that as a token of good faith the following should be done: The so-called leaders and generals of Nationalist China who not only broke the confidence of the American people but betrayed their own people, should dig down in the different caches where their ill-gotten money is hidden and return the same to be used for the purpose for which it was originally designed and intended, the preservation and integrity of the people of China. In other words, these leaders should come into the court of public opinion with clean hands.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

South Of The Border

INTO A conversation at a Washington dinner party the other evening came that now timeworn phrase, "The Forgotten Man." It drew from a Latin-American diplomat the following comment, spoken with surface humor which concealed his deep feeling.

"The 'Forgotten Man'? Surely you do not have to ask who he is today? He lives south of your border. He is any citizen of any of the American Republics long since forgotten by the great power that wicked demagogues in my country sometimes call the Colossus of the North."

This is a feeling that is growing with ever-increasing bitterness throughout Central and South America. It is one reason why the hostile propaganda of Soviet Russia, on the one hand, and Franco Spain, on the other, is finding a more and more sympathetic reception.

Business men from this country trying to do business in Latin-America find it difficult or impossible to get approval from the European Cooperation Administration for purchase of raw materials in the other Americas with ECA dollars. They report that this is true even though the price south of the border may be considerably lower than that of the North American supplier. Here, according to business men, is how the discrimination works.

ONE OF the small Central American Republics has perhaps two or three cash commodity crops to sell. The dollars the country needs to import a minimum of manufactured goods depend on the sale of those two or three commodities.

But the middleman finds that in many instances he is not even permitted to make a bid on a sale to Europe to be financed by ECA. This is true, it is charged, even though the Central or South American price is considerably lower than the North American price.

In this way, Latin-American countries are being excluded from commodity markets. They find themselves as pinched for dollars and as desperate for essential imports as European nations. This makes for political instability in which appeals of extremists on the Right and Left have a special force.

Administrator Paul Hoffman of ECA and his able deputy, William C. Foster, in charge in Hoffman's absence on a swing around Europe, are well aware of this situation. Their orders are to make offshore purchases in every instance in which the price is lower than the U. S. price. Under the law authorizing ECA, an exception to this rule is provided when a commodity shall be declared by the Department of Agriculture to be in surplus. Some commodities—wool, wheat and soybeans among them—are in surplus.

But Hoffman and Foster cannot possibly supervise the actions of their subordinates. For a variety of reasons, these subordinates seem almost invariably to favor commodity suppliers in this country, often regardless of the price differential.

IT MUST always be remembered, of course, that ECA operates with the hot breath of Congress on its neck. A tremendous effort was required to knock out the McClellan amendment, which would have compelled ECA to spend up to $1,600,000,000 for farm products in this country.

Special interest groups are continually on the alert to try to prevent United States dollars from going to buy commodities abroad. Hoffman once pointed out 129 such groups, each determined to protect itself from any foreign competition. In every foreign aid bill the special interest groups try to jam as many safeguards as possible, so that foreign nations cannot earn necessary dollars even through such traditional services as shipping.

This gets to the heart of the matter. If the United States insists on going on behaving as though it were still a debtor nation dependent on the production of raw materials, instead of the greatest creditor and manufacturer the world has ever seen, then there will be little hope that the present, lurching unbalance can be corrected.

The situation in Latin-America, in the meantime, is serious. Not only economically but diplomatically, the United States seems to be bent on bungling. In several countries firm friends of North America have been overthrown by military dictators. There are some who take such a gloomy view that they see in Latin-America "another China."

This may be unnecessarily pessimistic. But the signs of trouble south of the border cannot be casually ignored.

Vaughan's Rank

As l'affaire Vaughan expands into another week of Nation-wide publicity, it carries to the world the impression that a major general is misbehaving.

Unfortunate indeed for the service is the absurd custom of hanging military titles on political henchmen, just for the ornament.

Harry Vaughan is not a general. He is not in any sense a professional military man. The armed services have enough troubles of their own without being called upon to furnish cover for unscrupulous civilians.

A Communication

Immigration Laws And U. N. Treaties

THOSE who sign this letter, being all international lawyers, have been so disturbed by the bill introduced by Senator McCarran (S. 1832, May 11, 1949) that they wish to call attention to the violation of treaty obligations and of obligations to the United Nations which it would commit.

The bill, as drawn, includes this clause (Sec. 4, e):

"Any statute or other authority or provision having the force or effect of law, to the extent that it is inconsistent with any of the provisions of this Act, is hereby expressly declared to be inapplicable to any alien whose case is within the purview of this Act."

Obviously, these words cover treaties which, according to the Constitution, are (among other things) "the supreme law of the land." The proposed bill would therefore conflict with the Headquarters Agreement now in force between the United States and the United Nations, and with the principles upon which the United Nations was built.

The purpose of the bill is to amend the Immigration Act of October 16, 1918, so as to exclude any alien who seeks to enter the United States for the purpose of:

"(1) obtaining or transmitting information, not available to the public generally, respecting the national security, or (2) engaging in any activity a purpose of which is the control or overthrow of the Government of the United States by force or violence, or (3) organizing, aiding in any manner whatsoever, joining, associating with, or participating in the activities of any association, society or group, which shall be publicly designated by the Attorney General as provided in subsection (b) of this section as subversive to the national security."

Section 3 says: "No visa or other travel document shall be issued to any alien who the issuing officer knows, or has reason to believe . . ." seeks to enter for one of the purposes above. The Attorney General "shall exclude and deport" any alien belonging to one of the three categories above.

UNDER the wording above quoted, it would be possible, and perhaps obligatory, for the consul to deny a visa to the diplomatic representatives of Communist states to the United States. Much more disturbing, it would be possible for, or even mandatory upon, a consul (under Section 3, (2) and (3), to exclude from the headquarters of the United Nations any delegate from a Communist state member of the United Nations, or any secretariat official from such a state. The fundamental purposes of the United Nations would be frustrated by application of this law; and in practice, the decision would be made by some minor United States official, insofar as any discretion is left for anyone to make a decision.

There are two major results of this bill which alarm the signers below. In the first place, it would, if it became law, claim to be superior to any treaty made by the United States. The domestic courts would, according to previous precedents established by the Supreme Court, be bound by this law. (Taylor v. Morton, 2 Curtis 454, etc.) However, the international obligation would continue, regardless of what Congress may say, or what our courts may say. A treaty properly made is binding under international law, and the United States has on various occasions asserted this fundamental principle.

Thus, in 1833, the Secretary of State wrote, "The Government of the United States presumes that whenever a treaty has been duly concluded and ratified . . . an obligation is thereby imposed on each and every department of the Government to carry it into complete effect, according to its terms, and that on the performance of this obligation consists the due observance of good faith among nations."

The most authoritative statement of the law of treaties, that issued by the Harvard Research in International Law, says, "If a state cannot plead provisions in its fundamental law in justification of a failure on its part to perform its binding treaty obligations, it follows a fortiori that it cannot rely upon provisions in its ordinary legislation for any such purpose."

THUS, the result of passing such a law, or of a court decision upholding it, would be not to relieve the United States of its treaty obligations, but rather to make clear that we intended to violate the treaty, and thus establish more definitely our responsibility for an illegal act. As Dr. Hyde says, "It must be clear that while an American court may deem itself obliged to sustain an Act of Congress, however inconsistent with the terms of an existing treaty, its action in so doing serves to lessen in no degree the contractual obligation of the United States with respect to the other party or parties to the agreement."

The proposed law would, in the second place, subject to its provisions officials of the United Nations, an institution of which the United States is a loyal member, and which we invited here and to whom we are host. It would clearly contravene the pledges taken by the United States in Sections 11 and 13 of the Headquarters Agreement, for example: "Laws and regulations in force in the United States regarding the entry of aliens shall not be applied in such manner as to interfere with the privileges referred to in Section 11. When visas are required for persons referred to in that section, they shall be granted without charge and as promptly as possible."

Again, the Headquarters Agreement (Article 13, b, 1) says that the laws of the United States shall not be applied "to require any such person to leave the United States except with the prior approval of the Secretary of State," and this approval can be given only after consultation with the member state concerned, or with the Secretary General. Even if there were no treaty guaranteeing the rights of these officials, the passage of such a law would indicate a grave disrepect for the United Nations, which we are pledged to support.

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"I tell ya, Joe . . . when your wife gets back from vacation and finds the house neat as a pin . . . she'll REALLY be suspicious."

Truman Says West Must Arm

rived here at 10:30 a. m. flashing a grin and waving a golden overseas cap, a gift from the VFW on its fiftieth anniversary, the Chief Executive got a roaring welcome at the airport as he changed to a car for the drive to convention hall.

Also in his party was Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, presidential military aide. Vaughan rode from the airport in a convertible with Mrs. Fuller Warren, beautiful wife of the Florida governor.

Miami was showing little trace of nervousness over the first hurricane of the season which still was 48 hours away if it does continue its course toward the mainland.

The VFW awarded Mr. Truman a gold medal, its highest decoration, for his "efforts in the preservation of world peace." Then the party returned to the airport and left for Washington at 12:32 p. m., arriving at 3:40 p. m. (all time is Eastern Standard). It was the first of three such speeches Mr. Truman will deliver before veterans' organizations in as many weeks.

The President told the convention that the arms program is strictly for purposes of defense.

"We are not arming ourselves and our friends to start a fight with anybody," Mr. Truman told his fellow veterans. "We are building defenses so that we won't have to fight."

He said the military assistance program and the European recovery program are "part and parcel" of the same policy—to help free countries resist aggression.

"Economic recovery will lag if the haunting fear of military aggression is widespread. Such fear will prevent new investments from being made and new industries from being established.

"On the other hand, if protection against aggression is assured, economic recovery will move forward more rapidly."

Mr. Truman said he would prefer that "these bulwarks against aggression" be established by the United Nations.

"But," he said, "the Soviet Union has blocked every effort to establish an effective international police force and to free the world from the fear of aggression. For that reason, we have had to join other friendly nations in forming regional defense pacts."

He said the principles of the United Nations "are still our goal," but that the U. N. cannot meet such hopes until all nations are united in a desire for peace.

For this reason, he added, the United States has led the way by:

1. Approving aid to Greece and Turkey in 1947 which "preserved the integrity of both countries."

2. Initiating a program to aid 16 European nations in 1948 by adoption of the Marshall Plan which has "prevented general collapse in Europe."

3. Binding hemispheric ties in 1947 by signing the Pact of Rio de Janeiro joining North and South America in a defensive alliance.

4. Signing the North Atlantic Treaty "based on the principle that an armed attack on one member is an attack on all."

The next step, he said, is "to back up this principle with military assistance to European nations, and to certain other nations, which are unable to build up their defenses without outside help."

"Our aid will be limited to the material necessary to equip mobile defense forces," he said. "These forces will constitute no threat to the independence of other nations. The democratic nations have no desire for aggression; they only want to be able to defend their homes."

In addition to providing arms for the 11 nations in the Atlantic Pact, Mr. Truman said "we must continue our aid to Greece and Turkey."

"We should help Iran maintain its firm stand against Soviet pressure. And, in the Far East, two other republics—the Philippines and Korea—need military assistance if they are to maintain their national security."

Declaring that the postwar demand for a world in which people can live in security and liberty "cannot be suppressed," the President said two approaches have been offered.

He said the offer of organized communism is "a false one" behind which lies "tyranny and slavery."

"Our answer is based upon voluntary association among free nations," he said. "Mutual adjustment of our common problems and combined economic effort."

"We are convinced that our answer will prevail."

Matthews Tells VFW Unification Progresses

Miami, Fla., Aug. 22 (AP).—Unification of the armed forces is functioning with increased smoothness and assures maximum national security, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews said tonight.

Addressing the annual banquet of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, Matthews credited Secretary of Defense Louis Johnson with the leadership which has brought about a "new and better spirit to the Pentagon."

"It is reassuring to see our fellow citizens willing to look the stern realities of the present squarely in the face," said Matthews. "Only a few will fail to admit that the world's problems and ours emanate from Soviet Russia's conviction that communism must enfold the world in its smothering embrace through the realization of its dream of world conquest."

Gen. Lucius D. Clay said in an address: "We are on the way to victory" in the cold war against Communistic Russia.

Arms Aid Bill May Include Fund for Far East

today will begin final action on the arms bill, that:

"At the present time, we are not in a position where we feel justified in asking Congress for funds which we could neither program nor justify for China or the Far East."

But he added, in answer to questions:

"If the Congress wanted to give the Chief Executive some funds which he might use at his discretion, that might be wise to do . . . A comparatively small sum, which might be used in the Far East generally . . ."

The most vociferous of the congressional China-aid proponents are far from satisfied with nothing stronger than a general set-aside for the Far East.

But in the House, they went along with the unsuccessful compromise proposed by Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.), to add 100 million dollars to the bill, 75 million of it for use in China, and the balance in arms aid to "other areas in southeast Asia."

Although Lodge pointed out that his amendment did not specify Nationalist China as an aid recipient, but provided "flexible" presidential power to use the money for any forces fighting communism, it was defeated 164 to 92.

In the Senate committee, Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.) has introduced an amendment to authorize 175 million dollars to aid the "government of China," with that sum to come out of the over-all arms program.

Knowland told reporters yesterday that he is not "wedded" to any specific aid figure for China, and indicated he saw some hope of compromise.

Meanwhile, it was disclosed yesterday that Representative Lodge, and his brother, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (R., Mass.), both left this country by ship on Saturday for Europe.

Senator Vandenberg (R., Mich.) announced in the Senate that Lodge, a fellow member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, will serve as an "unofficial observer" of defense plans drawn by western European members of the North Atlantic Treaty.

Senator Lodge, a World War II liaison officer between the American Army and French forces, will visit Fontainebleau, headquarters of the joint command established under Field Marshal Montgomery for the Western Union nations—Great Britain, France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Luxembourg.

Those nations are to receive the bulk of the proposed arms aid.

Representative Lodge did not disclose his plans, but it is likely he may stop at the same place. During the last war he was liaison officer between the American and French fleets.

Both brothers are expected to be abroad several weeks.

"We wouldn't have missed seeing the world for the world"

Quotes from "Pitching Horseshoes" by BILLY ROSE

Eleanor and I wouldn't have missed seeing the world for the world ... Pan Am's flying hotels whisked us from one fabled hunk of terra firma to another ... almost every one of the 35,000 miles was jam-packed with the whacky and the wonderful.

Our sky buggy stopped at Wake Island and Dick Fisher, the airline's representative, invited us to lunch. And, brother, was that a meal! — clam chowder in foot-wide sea shells, lobster thermidor a la Escoffier and, for dessert, baked alaska that the chef on the old Ile de France would have bragged about.

In SHANGHAI I asked Bud Hawks, the local Pan American man, where I could get $20 in Chinese currency to take care of tips and cabs. "$5," he told me, "will get you more money than you can carry."

The TAJ MAHAL against the blue sky looked like embroidery in frozen milk, and I found myself remembering a guide-book quotation. "This is where the architect ends and the jeweler begins."

In PALESTINE, Eleanor joined in a Hora — an ancient folk dance that looks like a cross between a hill-billy hoe-down and a conga. Soon everyone was beating it out and chanting as they stomp-stepped in time with the music. And, for the next 10 minutes, 400 people, arms and emotions locked, let off enough steam to power the Twentieth Century all the way to Chicago.

In ITALY, FRANCE and ENGLAND, my wife and I got a good look-listen at their government subsidized opera houses and theatres, and usually we came away pop-eyed and perk-eared.

For the rest of my life I'll never let a year go by without setting six weeks aside for travel.

sonable" and "in line with other cities."

Some of the opposition to the transaction, he declared, has been grossly unjustified and an attack on his integrity. He cited implications that he and his associates had their eyes on an unrestricted Capital Transit surplus of about 2½ million dollars which could be distributed to stockholders.

"Assuming that I was that kind of businessman and wanted to wreck a company, what would it gain me?" Wolfson asked. "I'm now in the 77½ per cent income tax bracket and the Government would take most of any additional income.

Record an Open Book

"My record on past business deals is an open book. I've always stood for a square deal. I deeply resent the attack on my integrity in this transaction and doubly intend to go through with it, even if I have to carry it through the courts."

Refering to one part of an ICC examiner's recommendation that the deal be disapproved, Wolfson pointed out that a main argument was that he lived in Florida and therefore has no knowledge of or interest in the problems of the Washington public.

"I easily could have gotten around that," he said, "if I did business that way. A prominent Washington resident offered to front for me, but I told him nothing doing. The case must stand on its merits."

Curly-headed, handsome and strapping, Wolfson has amassed a fortune since his graduation from the University of Georgia in 1932. He estimated that his net worth is about six million dollars.

From the gridiron, where he starred both in high school and college days, he has shown one outstanding characteristic—he doesn't like to play on a losing team. The University of Georgia team on which he played defeated Yale twice and finished second in the Southeastern Conference during his final year.

He enjoys working on challenging problems, especially financial ones. His background shows several cases where he moved into a company that was in the red and guided it back to profitable operations.

His first business experience was the launching of the Florida Pipe & Supply Co. He and a brother started that with $5000. Later, two other brothers joined and the firm is now known as the Wolfson Brothers with assets listed at more than 2½ million dollars.

Associated with "Lou" Wolfson in the purchase of Capital Transit stock control are his three brothers—Sam, Saul and Cecil—and five associates: J. A. B. Broadwater, Doran S. Weinstein, Jack Surasky, E. B. Gerbert and A. J. Rosenthal. With him in Washington yesterday were Broadwater, Weinstein, Gerbert, Cecil Wolfson and their New York attorney, John J. Manning.

This group also has figured in Wolfson's rise to power in such well-known corporations as Eastern Ship Salvage, Universal Pipelines, Merritt-Chapman & Scott, Monogram Pictures, Republic Pictures, a chain of 17 movie houses and the Tampa Shipbuilding Co.

Wolfson maintains that while he wants to protect stockholder interests in his companies, he always looks out for labor, too. As proof, he points to the bonus plans he starts as soon as possible. Corroborated a colleague: "After Tampa Shipbuilding was sold, I read astounding letters from many employes . . . who reiterated their desire for continued association under his leadership."

Because of its many angles, the transit stock shift case has mushroomed into one of the most complex local financial stories of the decade. Here are the various persons, factions and agencies that are vitally interested:

1—The Wolfson group.

2—North American Co. of New York, which must obey a Government order to sell its holdings of Capital Transit stock.

3—The Securities and Exchange Commission, which issued the disposal order and which has held one hearing, but is withholding its decision.

4—The Interstate Commerce Commission, whose examiner (Vernon F. Baker) recommended that the sale to the Wolfson group be disapproved. The ICC is expected to give its formal decision early in September.

5. Capital Transit Co. management, whose directorate has already rejected a stockholders' proposal that the company itself buy the block of stock that is up for sale.

6. Employes of the transit system, more than 4300 of whom depend on their wages for a livelihood.

7. All Transit stockholders, especially two organized groups (headed by James O'Donnell and C. L. McCrea). The minority groups are bitterly opposed to the transaction and are vigorously trying to form a local syndicate to bid for the block of stock.

8. The District Public Utilities Commission, which feels that it has no right yet to intervene but which naturally is interested in any possibility of a change in control of an essential public convenience.

9. Local investment brokers, who tried unsuccessfully some time ago to form a local syndicate to bid for the stock.

10 Last but far from least—the general public which is anxiously concerned over the prospect of 'outsiders' taking over the one mass transportation system here and possibly lowering its standards for the sake of more profits.

The "FLOM" trunk left New York, but Erin O'Brien-Moor's things for "The Heiress" is now likely enmeshed on a siding . . . 'The Male Animal'

Thurber and Nugent Satirized Today's Follies Ten Years Ago

The two Ohio State alumni who wrote "The Male Animal" 10 years ago proved as prophetic as they then seemed timely. The James Thurber-Elliott Nugent comedy last night opened a week's run at the Meridian Hill Theater with Tom Ewell as the star and throughout one was struck by situations as fresh as recent news stories.

The story of a professor suspected of teaching subversive matter to his students is the theme of the play, a theme, too, of numberless news stories in the past year from the Nation's schools and colleges.

Then there's the reference to a university professor suspected of being a Red because he once made a trip to Russia to study the theater.

Only last month the president of Actors' Equity was held up by some lesser immigration officials because it was noted in his passport that he had attended last year's International Theater Institute meeting in Prague. When it was pointed out to the suspicious officials that this was an activity of UNESCO, part of the United Nations, they simply admitted they didn't know what UNESCO was and reiterated their question: "Why go to Prague?"

As the trustee chairman states in "The Male Animal," that seemed to those officials a heck of a distance to go to see a show.

The reading of Vanzetti's harmless, yes, moving, letter is a climax of the plot. Much is made by the authors that nobody has read this letter; they simply fear it, the unknown. Put this alongside the recent attacks on the film version of "Oliver Twist" by those who admit they have not seen it. What have you got but more of the same?

Skilled Collaboration

Such thoughts, fed by the civilized observations of Thurber and the theatrical shrewdness of Nugent, brought up in the theater, could hardly have escaped last night's amused audience. The comedy has, to be sure, become an almost yawningly established regular on summer, amateur and collegiate stages, but there are always those to whom it's fresh.

Ewell and his fellows, notably Michael Sivy, are at their best in the well-known drinking bout that closes the second act. Ewell and Sivy played this well last night. It is up Ewell's street, this scene of a man conscious of what's happening to him, but unable to do much about it. The dialogue about humans and animals, particularly the male animal, is sheer Thurber and that's the cream of modern American humor.

Bob Gallagher, looking a bit young for the supposedly beefy footballer, puts a deal of punch in the part and the hard-working Barbara Joyce plays the hero's vacillating wife. Kenneth Treseder is effective as the dean of the English department.—R. L. C.

Coal Strike Idles 83,000 Britons

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—A wildcat strike of 800 coal mine elevator operators in northern England threw 83,000 men out of work today.

The loss of coal, one of the main items in Britain's export drive, was estimated at 80,000 tons a day.

Coal pits in the Yorkshire and Lancashire areas were affected by the strike of pit winders who run the machinery which sends the cages up and down the shafts. The union has about 2000 members.

The strikers are demanding a pay increase to the equivalent of $7 a day. The present wage ranges from $4.36 to $5.20.

The Government, which runs the mines, has insisted the demand be handed to an arbitration board.

Fairfax Commissioner, Neck Broken, Is Better

Fairfax County Commissioner of Revenue, John W. Ferguson is recovering in Doctors Hospital from two broken vertebrae in his neck. He fell down the stairs at his home in Clifton Station last week. The injury is expected to keep him away from his job for about two months.

Steel Held Caught In Race for Power

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—An official of "Big Steel" charged today that the steel industry was caught "in the bitter race for power" between huge labor monopolies.

Enders M. Voorhees, chairman of the finance committee of the U. S. Steep Corp., implied that the bitter competitors were John L. Lewis and Philip Murray.

Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, has won $100 a month pensions for coal miners. Murray, president of the CIO and of the one-million-member United Steelworkers of America, has made pensions a main point in his fourth round 30-cent hourly "package" demand against the steel industry.

Voorhees wound up the steel industry's eight-day direct argument against wage increases before President Truman's steel fact-finding board.

Voorhees said he was certain that Lewis' success in getting pensions, insurance and wage increases for his miners "at the expense of other segments of the public arouses other union leaders' envy and goads them to seek equal or greater goals."

"Demand here made upon us," he said. "It is a prime instance of the effect of the virus of big unionism. The company, the industry, the public, our employes, our customers, our suppliers and our stockholders are caught, with the government itself, in the bitter race for power of giant labor monopolies."

In a day-long argument United States Steel, which accounts for one-third of American steel production, contended that the steel worker has no need for a pay increase and that a fourth-round wage boost would be a serious hazard to the workers and the national economy.

The union has demanded a 12½ cents pay hike, 11.23 cents an hour for pensions and 6.27 cents for social insurance.

The fact-finding board must report to Mr. Truman by August 31 its recommendations for a "fair and equitable" settlement of the steel dispute. The union has postponed a Nation-wide steel strike until September 14, under the President's 60-day truce.

The union on Tuesday will begin a three-day rebuttal of the arguments presented by 58 companies.

Crop Support Worries Lucas

Senator Aiken (R., Vt.). This passed the Republican-controlled Eightieth Congress, and is scheduled to go into effect next January. 1. It authorizes a flexible price-support system under which supports might be lowered in times of big surpluses, in order to discourage over-planting.

The Anderson plan—named for Senator Anderson (D., N. Mex.), former Secretary of Agriculture. It's a compromise proposal.

In general, it provides for high support prices in 1950—at about the same level as the Gore plan.

But it would permit the props to be lowered in later years if supplies were excessive.

Brannan yesterday was pressed for an answer to this question: Which did he like the better, the Anderson or the Gore plan?

"I don't like to make a choice between the two," Brannan replied. "There is something to be desired in both."

Brannan said his department would work hard to make a success of any plan passed by Congress.

But he said he'd like to see some kind of provision which would enable the department "to deal with the four-million-bushel corn crop we're going to have on our hands."

"Without it," he added, "we're going to be in a pretty difficult position."

Brannan said that he expects the heavy marketings of hogs this fall to force prices below Government support levels. If that happens, he said, the Government will be forced to buy pork products and put them in cold storage.

Anderson asked Brannan if controls are planned next year on corn.

"It's not decided yet," Brannan said, "but we are seriously studying it."

Chairman Thomas (D., Okla.) asked Brannan whether control over production and marketing is necessary if the Government supports prices.

"Why, yes, I think it is," said Brannan.

"That's what I've been trying to get you to say," said Senator Ellender (D., La.). He said that farmers who produce cotton, tobacco, peanuts and rice favor controls, while corn and wheat farmers object.

"I don't see why you keep talking about corn farmers," said Lucas. "You cotton fellows get about everything you want around here."

Brannan Fears Gray Hairs —Beg Pardon—Wrinkles

By The Associated Press

Secretary of Agriculture Brannan drew a big laugh at a Senate hearing yesterday in predicting that the farm problem "is going to give us all a few gray hairs."

While Senators and spectators roared, Brannan rubbed his bald head and then added:

"Maybe I should change that to a few wrinkles."

Brannan was a witness before the Senate Agriculture Committee.

Magee Appointed General Counsel Of Medical Plan

Appointment of Warren E. Magee, Washington attorney, as general counsel of Medical Service of the District of Columbia was announced yesterday by Theodore Wiprud, secretary of the District Medical Society.

Medical Service is a prepaid medical plan, similar to the Blue Cros hospitalization organization, supervised by physicians.

Magee was a defense attorney for Baron Ernst von Weizsaecker, former German secretary of state, at one of the war crimes trials at Neurnberg, Germany.

Ching Offers Mediation in Hawaii Strike

Honolulu, Aug. 22 (AP).—An invitation to Federal mediation talks in Washington or New York and a new line of injunction proceedings marked this 114th day of Hawaii's crippling water front strike.

Cyrus S. Ching, director of the United States Conciliation Service, asked employers and strikers to make a new effort at direct settlement and, if this failed, to go to Washington or New York to meet with him and other Government mediators at any time.

A spokesman for the striking CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union said a committee of employers would discuss the proposal first.

The ILWU in San Francisco announced that a caucus of its stevedores and clerks from the United States and western Canada voted unanimously today to support the Hawaiian strikers. They also voted to demand a United States Senate investigation of "the strikebreaking activities of Governor Ingram M. Stainback."

The strike by about 2000 stevedores began May 1 to enforce a demand for a 32-cent increase in their $1.40 hourly wages.

Harry Bridges, union president, said at a negotiation session last week that the union demand now was "26 cents or substantially less."

He told a press conference in San Francisco today, "in fact, we will consider any proposal between 1 cent and 26 cents so we can get negotiations under way again."

Employers reluctantly offered a 14-cent raise several weeks ago but withdrew it when the union rejected it.

In an effort to reopen the Territory's paralyzed ports, the Territorial government has gone into the stevedoring business under a special emergency law, which has brought on a maze of legal proceedings.

65,000 Stevedores Seek Wage Hike From NYSA

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—The New York Shipping Association said today it has been served with demands for a 22-cent-an-hour wage increases for 65,000 AFL stevedores on the East Coast.

John V. Lyon, chairman of the NYAS,e said the demands wer made at a meeting with the AFL International Longshoremen's Union to discuss a new contract. The present one expires September 30.

He said the union also asked a pension plan, better vacations, load limits and a change in the shapeup plan.

The present base wage is $1.88 an hour, Lyon said.

Quickest Way to Improve a Highway!

WHEN YOU TAKE your first ride at the wheel of a 1949 Cadillac, please take it over the road you'd like most to see improved—the one where the bumps and curves and depressions annoy you the most.

And see how magically they either disappear, or become so minimized that you are scarcely aware of their existence.

Yes, the quickest way to improve a highway is to ride it in a 1949 Cadillac!

You really have to experience Cadillac comfort before you can appreciate what it's like.

First of all, there's the wonderful way in which the car holds the road. As one driver so aptly expressed it—"The car goes where you aim it—and the rear end follows the front!"

Then there's the steady, soft, even ride—so level and easy that it actually induces relaxation.

And, of course, there's the marvelous certainty of control, which gives such supreme confidence to both driver and passengers. The powerful, eager engine responds instantly to the accelerator; steering is positive and easy; brakes are velvet-soft to the touch and instantaneous in action.

Truly, a ride in a Cadillac is a lesson in relaxation.

Have you thought of a road you'd like to see improved? If so, drop in some day—and we'll take you over it in a 1949 Cadillac.

Giants Sell Mize to Yanks in Straight Cash Deal

Braves Beat Bums, 7 to 6, On Heath's Hit in Ninth

Boston, Aug. 22 (AP).—In a dramatic ninth inning finish, Boston's Braves downed the stumbling Dodgers, 7-6, today knocking Brooklyn a little farther off the road toward the National League pennant.

Eddie Stanky, once the popular brat of Brooklyn fandom, belted his first homer of the season to tie the score 6-6 as Boston's leadoff batter in the ninth.

With Al Dark on first and two out, Jeff Heath, hitless all day, drove a 3-2 pitch to deepest center field. Duke Snider, Dodger centerfield, chased back and leaped against the fence.

The ball banged off his glove for a double and the winning run. Snider fell in a heap but was able to leave the field under his own power.

The loss dropped the Dodgers two full games behind the leading St. Louis Cardinals with whom they begin an important series tomorrow in Brooklyn.

The Dodgers came to Boston tied for the top but the Braves won three of four games.

The Dodgers put on a rally of their own to go ahead in the ninth inning.

Trailing 5-4, they chased Reliefer Nels Potter who was found for two runs on a walk, a soft liner to center, a sacrifice bunt on which he threw late to third base, a long flyout and Spider Jorgensen's line single.

Bob Hall finally got the Brooks out without further damage.

Stanky's homer, the seventh he has hit in seven years in the big league and his first in Boston, was the third of the game.

Bill Salkeld banged one for the Braves to start a two-run attack in the fourth, and the Dodgers' Roy Campanella blasted his fifteenth in the fifth.

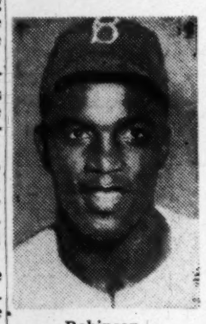
Jackie Tells His Own Story

Robinson Never Forgets Mother's Advice

By JACKIE ROBINSON
(As told to Ed Reid)

NEXT to my wife, I think my mother, Mallie, has been the most important person in the world to me. Believe me, if we kids went hungry on Glorietta st., you can bet money that my mother was twice as hungry. Imagine raising five kids on the money that a domestic got in those days.



Robinson

She was always out doing for us, and I think that her encouragement is mostly responsible for my being where I am today. It made me realize there was somebody battling and pushing us along. With a mother like that a fellow just had to make good.

The realization there was somebody else in this world beside little me came all of a sudden in junior college. It happens earlier or later to most people—to some people it doesn't happen at all.

Mallie Robinson was and is very religious. She had me in Sunday School and church all the time and brought me up a Methodist.

Besides having faith in my mother, I came to realize through her that I had a lot of faith in God. I came to know that for sure when I was still pretty young. There's nothing like faith in God to help a fellow who gets booted around once in a while.

GENERALLY, when you think of a baseball player you think of a guy who lives continually in an atmosphere of yelling crowds, summer dust, base hits and batting averages. His batting average or his pitching record are his Bibles—he stands or falls on those.

Well, I've got another Bible, and I'm not ashamed to admit it. I also am not ashamed to admit that I often get down on my knees to pray. It's the best way to get close to God and a hard hit ground ball.

One of the things I do is pray for my team. And when things go wrong I pray harder. I really believe that God is on the side of my team and that we will get the breaks. One thing I will say, though, and that is: If you pray for something like the pennant you have to get out and work twice as hard as before to win it.

You have to merit the things you pray for.

One of the things I miss, and I know other players do, too, is a chance to go to church on Sundays when we have an early game and you have to report to the dressing room and get ready for a little practice before the game.

I don't think I sound silly, at all, when I say if a little chapel could be built at Ebbets Field, where the fellows of all religions could go and worship a little while on Sunday morning, it would help a lot all around.

MY MOTHER worked hard and sacrificed a lot for us kids. She did not have much education but her advice and encouragement meant a lot to all of us.

I am glad to say I have been able to repay her a little for all the sacrificing she did for me and my brothers and sister. She is still living on Pepper st. in Pasadena.

Not in the same house though. Edgar has helped her build a new one, and we pushed the old one back of that. We started to rent the old house, and when I got my mother clear of debt she also bought the house next door. She lives in the new house and rents the other two and has enough income to get along without my help any more.

I am always calling my mother on the telephone. I am the youngest member of the family, but I think my traveling and experiences have made me a little older than any of them now. I am always asked for advice by them.

I remember my mother always told us to take advantage of what little we had. "Use what you have to the best," she would say. One of her happiest days was when I graduated from junior high school and through some miracle she was able to get me my first real suit.

I remember I cried a little when I saw it and my mother said she always believed the Lord would take care of us. Right then

N. L. Teams Surprise by Waiving Him Out of Loop

New York, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Johnny Mize of the New York Giants tonight was sold to the New York Yankees.

The sale was announced by the Giants shortly after Club President Horace Stoneham closed the deal with Co-owners Del Webb and Dan Topping of the Yankees.

The announcement said it was a straight sale for "an undisclosed amount of cash."

Joins Yanks Right Away

Mize left immediately for Detroit, where the Yankees are scheduled to play the Tigers tomorrow.

The sale of the slugging first baseman was not exactly a surprise since Giant Manager Leo Durocher had made known his desire to be rid of Mize ever since Durocher took over the club last year.

However, what was most amazing was the fact that the Giants were able to get waivers from all other National League clubs in order to peddle Mize to an American League team.

Mize had been benched by the Giants in recent games for not hitting. However, his sale goes beyond this present slump. One of Durocher's first statements when he took over the Giants was that "we may sell Mize."

Reported Deal Failed

During the spring, when the Brooklyn Dodgers were desperately seeking a first baseman, Dodger President Branch Rickey conferred with Durocher, presumably about the purchase of Mize in Texas. Nothing ever came of the talks, however.

Noted as a slugger, Mize last year tied with Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh for the National League home run championship with 40. He has hit 18 homers this year and was batting .265 when Durocher benched him a week ago.

He has led the National League or tied for the lead in homers four times. Thrice he led the league in runs batted in.

The addition of Mize should greatly strengthen the Yanks' pennant bid.

Long Ball Hitters

Mize, who has never played on a major league pennant winner, will give the Yanks a trio of long ball hitters. Mize probably will bat behind Tommy Henrich and Joe DiMaggio, the Yanks top run producers at the moment. When Yogi Berra, injured Yank catcher returns, Manager Casey Stengel will have four of the game's best long-ball hitters in action.

The purchase of Mize also enables Stengel to shift Henrich back to his favorite position, right field.

Henrich was brought in to play first after Rookie Dick Kryhoski was optioned to Oakland in the deal that gave relief pitcher Ralph Buxton to the Yanks.

Maybe Whelchel Can Pull Rank on Duden

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Aug. 22 (NYHT).—Through a window opening onto the porch came the voice of Jack Lavelle, football's most prodigious undercover operator, newly returned from an espionage mission to Green Bay, Wis., where he had seen the Packers trampled in an exhibition game with the Philadelphia Eagles.

"So the plane is late and I drop in for a quick cup of coffee at this hash joint where they're suspected of serving horse meat. There's an inspector in the joint and I hear the proprietor arguing with him: 'Horse meat? Horse meat? Listen, here is nothing but the finest grade A beef from big beautiful Black Angus steers.'

Red Smith

"Bring me a sample," the inspector says, and the guy goes back into the kitchen and after a while he comes out with a sizzling platter holding two gorgeous steaks, this thick and as big around as this.

"Wonderful," the inspector says. "I'll try one of 'em."

"You gotta eat both of 'em," the proprietor says.

"I can't eat both of 'em," the fellow says. "I aint that hungry. "You'll take two."

"I'll take one," the inspector says. Why can't I have just one?"

"Can't split 'em," the proprietor says. "They're an entry."

STEVENS OWEN had been talking of the progress the football Giants were making up here in their woodsy training camp.

Last year, Steve had been saying, he had only three ends who were of any value to him and the material had been thin at tackle. Yesterday's scrimmage had encouraged a notion that reinforcements had arrived.

"Dick Duden, for example," Steve had said. "Dick came of age yesterday."

Now Duden sat chatting in the dining quarters adjoining the porch which was Mr. Lavelle's rostrum. Dick is the young man from Manhattan who went to sea after captaining the Navy team three years ago, put in two years of boat riding and then decided he'd rather be right end than admiral.

"I talked to him a year ago about joining us," Steve had related. "He thought then that his tour of duty might be ending and he said he'd let me hear from him. I heard from him, all right. From the Mediterranean."

DUDEN WAS preceeded into the National League by his first Annapolis coach, Billick Whelchel. When Whelchel coached the last Navy team to defeat Army, he was a lieutenant commander. When he retired to become coach of the Washington Redskins last winter, he was an admiral.

The game at West Point which Navy won was Duden's first against the Cadets. To the comparatively small crowd that got into Michie Stadium, it remains memorable as the fiercest, roughest undergraduate scrap ever witnessed.

"I got in after the first quarter," Dick said, "and when we lined up, that big Army center, Myslinski, was the backer-up directly across the line from me. He looked up and pointed and hollered, "Get that so-and-so."

"I'd never seen the guy before. I looked around to see who it was behind me that he hated so much. There wasn't anybody behind me. It was me he hated. That's the way it was all that afternoon."

Out on the porch, Mr. Lavelle was musing.

"Suppose we're playing Washington," he said, "and Ensign Duden goes for a pass near the sideline and Admiral Whelchel shouts a command. Who ranks who?"

Sauer Works Middies Hard

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 22 (AP).—Navy got down to earnest practice today for its 1949 football season.

A uniformed squad of 72 turned out for the first official fall practice. Coach George Sauer wasted no time in starting the hard work, sending linemen to the charging machines and the backs and ends on passing maneuvers.

Coach Sauer, who still has to post his first victory since coming to Navy last year, will have five weeks to prepare for the opener at Southern California, September 24.

The workouts, which will run twice a day until September 1 and once a day after that, started under a temperature in the high 80s.

There were only 11 lettermen among the 72 candidates and most of them barely earned their varsity "N" last season. More than half of them, 37 to be exact, were Plebes last year and the remainder were former Jay-vees.

In a resume of the work ahead, Coach Sauer said "of course, we will spend a great deal of time on our passing game and fundamentals, too, but the points that stand out in my mind as those needing the most work are our ground attack and our pass defense."

U. S. Bets 33 Million Per Day On Ball Games, Paper Reports

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—The New York Post Home News said today that 33 million dollars a day—aggregating five billion dollars a season—is wagered in the country on baseball.

"Every penny of it is outside the law," the Post said.

In the first of a series of articles, based on a month-long inquiry by five reporters, the newspaper said:

"Baseball, cleanest of all professional sports, is the innocent center of the largest and most dangerous gambling web in the nation's history.

"It has become the greatest source of gamblers' revenue in the country, outstripping horse-racing."

Baseball gambling, the Post Home News said, ranges from "the $50,000-a-game professional gambler at one end of the scale, the small poolroom bettor in the middle, and the school children, risking their pennies on weekly pools in candy stores, at the other end."

In the New York metropolitan area alone, the newspaper said, 10 million dollars a day is bet on baseball.

The story added, "It is difficult, but not impossible, to get legal evidence to convict, even though gamblers operate openly at ball parks—despite efforts to stop them—and elsewhere."

Marx to Meet New York Team

Johnstown, Pa., Aug. 22.—Marx Jewelers of Washington, D. C., were paired against Manhattan-Bronx, N. Y., for tomorrow's 1 p.m. opener in the All-American Amateur Baseball Association junior tournament here.

Harry Brightman, undefeated in 14 starts, was nominated by Manager Joe Branzell to pitch for Marx, which won 31, lost three and tied one this season.

Trend Reflected Here, Even With School Children

With no trouble at all, it's possible for adult or child to wager on baseball games in Washington.

At Griffith Stadium, the gamblers convene in the grandstand behind home plate near the concession stand. Odds are usually quoted 45 minutes before game time. Most of the betting doesn't begin, however, until the starting pitchers begin warming up.

There are scores of bookmakers in Washington, who will take bets on games all around the big league circuit. And if you're a steady customer, and you're tied down to your business, it's possible to get your odds over the telephone and lay your bets by proxy, with assurances that you'll be paid off if you win.

School kids are also in the gambling business. In the local junior and senior high schools, a budding young bettor can walk down the corridor at lunch time and make his own special type of bet.

Garvin's Girls Win, 7-5 For Recreation Title

Garvin's Grill girls softball team won the D. C. Recreation Department championship by overcoming a 5-0 deficit and downing the Maillanders, 7-5, yesterday at the Lincoln Memorial.

Peggy Kirk Shoots 73, Wins Medal

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—Peggy Kirk, a personable 27-year-old tournament campaigner from Findlay, Ohio, breezed around the Westmoreland Country Club course in a record-breaking 73 today to win medalist honors in the Women's Western Amateur golf qualifying test.

Competing in her seventh Western Amateur meet, Miss Kirk proved she was ready for the first time to enter a strong bid for the crown.

Birdies on the 8th and 9th holes with 15 and 12-foot putts gave her a par 38 on tha front nine. Three birdies and a great eagle 3 on the 410-yard 18th with a six foot putt helped her fashion a 35 coming in.

The standard for the 6,565-yard route is 38-38—76.

Playing the best golf of her career this season, raven-haired Miss Kirk became a definite pretourney favorite for the 49th annual Western title by winning the North-South championship and the Augusta titleholders diadem in Augusta last spring. She also is Ohio State women's champion.

The Western Amateur, however, has always eluded her. Although she has qualified for the last seven, the highest she reached was the semifinals in 1943.

Only one hour before Miss Kirk posted her dazzling 73, Helen Sigel, 29-year-old Philadelphia city champion and runner up in the 1948 National, slammed 36-38—74 to match Westmoreland's record set during the women's Western Derby in 1940 by Ella Mae Williams and Betty Hicks. Miss Sigel, making her first start in this meet, wasted a trap shot to take a one-over six on the eighteenth.

Grouped at 76 were Marjorie Lindsay of Decatur, 1949 Illinois State champion, and 15-year-old Marlene Bauer of Los Angeles, Western and National Junior winner.

Beverley Hanson of Fargo, N. Dak., one of the more promising young amateurs, was way off the pace with 81.

Griffs Play Tribe Tonight

Cleveland, Aug. 22.—The last place Nats show off their latest 11-game losing streak here tomorrow night in the opener of a two-game series with the third place Cleveland Indians.

Only five games behind the pace-setting Yankees, the still dangerous Tribesmen are taking no chances with the Nats and are sending their ace righthander Bob Lemon to the hill.

Ray Scarborough, the Nats' biggest winner, with an 8-10 record, opposes Lemon, whose big bat has helped him win 15 games against 8 losses. Lemon has 7 homers, and is only two short of Wes Ferrell's old mark.

Shut out in two games of their recent three-game series with the Red Sox, and able to score only once in the other contest, the Nats warmly welcomed back into their midst Eddie Robinson.

The husky first baseman has been on the sidelines for the past week because doctors found out too late that Eddie is allergic to penicilin.

$1424 Daily Double At Rockingham

Salem, N. H., Aug. 22 (AP).—Race fans started the second week of the current Rockingham Park meeting by collecting a $1424.40 for $2 daily double.

Apron Face won the first, a 6-furlong test for older horses, and paid $16.40, $10 and $5.60 in straight betting. The second went to Entreat, who was worth $43.20, $18.80 and $12.80 in the mutuels. The second race also was 6 furlongs but was restricted to 2-year olds.

Eckel Wins Net Title

Bottles Barred

Phils Facing $1000 Fine in Fans' Barrage

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Faced with a fine of $1000 as a result of yesterday's bottle barrage that cost them a forfeited game to the New York Giants, the Phils took their first move to prevent a recurrence of such incidents.

They banned the sale of pop in bottles in Shibe Park. Fans, who showered the diamond with bottles yesterday because of an umpire's ruling, will be drinking from paper cups from now on.

Connie Mack, jr., assistant treasurer of the Athletics, issued a statement, saying:

"Hereafter, the venders will carry paper cups for soft drinks, and if we use bottles at all they will be handled as they are in other parks. The vendor will open the bottles and pour the contents into the cups."

"Unfortunately," Mack continued, "we are also faced with the problem of patrons who bring bottles and cans into the park. We can't search everyone who comes into the park with a large package. We will have to give considerable thought to that."

The bottle-tossing episode happened in the second game of the Phils-Giants doubleheader yesterday. The Giants led, 3-2, when Joe Lafeta hit a low line drive to center field. Richie Ashburn said he caught the ball before it hit the ground, but umpire George Barr said he didn't.

The fans agreed with Ashburn and the pop bottle and fruit barrage that followed forced Head Umpire Al Barlick to declare the first forfeited game in seven years.

Whether the Phillies pay a fine will have to await the arrival from Colorado of President Ford Frick of the National League. Frick is en route to New York and is not expected before Wednesday.

President Bob Carpenter of the Phillies said that "if my club is fined I'll demand that Barr undergo an eye test."

3 D. C. Girls Lose in Philly

Special to The Washington Post

Philadelphia, Aug. 22.—Carol Mortimer, Washington, D. C., junior titleholder, was defeated, 7—5, 6—1, by Joann Whitley, Middletown, Ohio, in the second round of the thirty-second annual National Girls Tennis Championship tournament which opened here at Philadelphia Cricket Club, with a record 105 entries.

Miss Mortimer, 14, and recent graduate of Alice Deal Junior High, reached the second round on the default of Betty Seay of El Paso, Tex. In the second round, Miss Mortimer opposed Miss Whitley and ran up a 5—2 lead but dropped the set and match to the power and all around ability of her more experienced opponent.

Harriet Hines of Washington was defeated, 6—3, 6—2, in the first round by Bonnie Mackay of Wyoming, Ohio, the thirteenth seeded player on the American list.

Nancy Corse of Baltimore played 18-year-old Joyce Higgy of Columbus, Ohio, despite big blisters on both heels, and lost, 6—0, 6—2, in the opening round.

Belmar Gunderson of Falls Church, Va., put up a terrific battle, but joined her neighbors on the sidelines by losing, 7—6, 8—6, to Betsy Lyons, Massachusetts State girl champion, from Longwood Cricket Club, in another first-round contest.

Redskin Tickets Still Available

If you have been wondering about Washington Redskins seats for this fall, many tickets still are available.

"I don't know where people got the impression that we have sold out of season tickets," Business Manager John Thompson said yesterday. "We'll have season tickets on sale until October 1, unless we sell all of them out before then. After that date, tickets left will be sold on a game-by-game basis."

DiMag Hurt Again, Stays With Club

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankee outfielder, suffered a sprain of his left shoulder in a game with the Philadelphia Athletics last Saturday but will leave with the American League leaders tonight when they head for Detroit.

Dr. Sidney Gaynor, club physician, examined DiMaggio today and recommended heat treatment. X-ray pictures showed there were no fractures or calcium deposits.

Harding Wins, 3-2

Hymie Pollard hurled a seven-hitter to help Harding Hardware oust the Naval Communication Service from the double elimination D. C. Amateur Softball Association tourney, 3-2, last night at Greenbelt. In the second game of the double-header Thrifty Beverages downed Anacostia Motors 5-1.

The Big Wind Didn't Stop Avid Anglers

By Ralph Murdock

REFUSING to be intimidated by last week's six-day nor'easter off Holland Point, the fishermen came out in droves last weekend, and were rewarded when the big wind suddenly abated.

Murdock

An actual count revealed that 134 fishing boats loaded with anglers, a record, were on the scene. It was just like a big "county fair." The air was crisp and brought out a rare collection of plaid shirts. Even the gals were wearing 'em. Fishing hats, some of the throw-away types, were much in evidence ,but every angler had but a single thought —fishing.

Vernon Palmer, John Aloysius Clarke, the writer, and the missus fished from the Bonnie Bett which was one of the 134 boats "afishing." We came out from Deale's with Capt. Doyle Kendall doing the steering. We picked up eight rock on the way out. The fish soon disappeared and a lull followed. We then moved up the bay to Broad Water and started drifting. In 1½ hours we nabbed five hardheads, a dozen spot and 22 big white perch. The action was fast and furious while it lasted.

A SQUINT THROUGH the binoculars indicated that the rockfish were feeding on the surface off North Beach Park. A hurried trip to the latter spot produced 22 more pan-size rock. They were still on the surface when we left for home.

Two musicians played "havoc" (a musical number in piscatorial night life) by boating 21 giant hardheads after sundown off Franklin Manor. The anglers, Ralph (Curly) Fox, who formerly thumped the drums at several of our leading local theaters, and Warfield (Piggy) Eller, who strums the "big fiddle" on a television show, could not explain where they caught the fish.

F. W. ROBINSON of Herndon, Va., loves the old homstead in Virginia, but when it comes to fishing he has other loves. So he ups and buys himself a cottage at Snug Harbor, just off Chesapeake Bay. With a friend from McLean, Va., they landed five big croakers in 10 minutes. The fish stopped as quickly as they started. There was only one thing left to do—quit.

Here's the hard luck fishing party for the weekend. The anglers were Pat Kline, clothes merchant and his wife, Sunny, Hale Lycett and his wife Betty, and Mooney Herwood and his wife, Betty. They drifted and caught two spot. They then anchored. The captain fell into a light snooze. Pat caught an eel which none of the anglers could get rid of.

Bones Aparte Killed, D. C. Rider Breaks Collarbones

Two Others Take Spills At Bel Air

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Bel Air, Md., Aug. 22.—Jockey Carty Meyerhoffer of Washington, D. C., suffered two broken collarbones and his mount, Grant Thorn's Bones Aparte, was killed in a series of spills that marked today's fifth race. Three other riders escaped with bruises.

Bones Aparte fell as the field turned into the backstretch, throwing Meyerhoffer into the flying heels of other horses. W. S. McCabe's Raw Cord stumbled and fell over the prostrate Bones Aparte and Edward Tompkins' Cuban Bill tripped and went down. Jockey Lamar Bauer, aboard Raw Cord, was knocked out, but recovered quickly, while Apprentice Dick Lawless, who rode Cuban Bill, was soon on his feet.

Bones Aparate broke his neck and died as a result.

Meyerhoffer returned to action just last Wednesday when Bel Air opened. He was sidelined the previous seven weeks with a broken collarbone suffered in a similar spill at Charles Town.

Marcsday Falls at Gate

In a separate accident, L. F. Ponfield's Marcsday lost his footing leaving the gate for the 7 furlong event and fell. His rider, Johnny Regalbuto, wiggled clear of horses, however.

Bauer and Regalbuto were kept under a physician's care for further examination but Lawless, current apprentice sensation in this State, resumed his riding.

With four of the field of ten eliminated, R. N. Boerner's Breakable Miss, ridden by Jockey Patsy Grant, was the winner by a length and a half margin. Mrs. W. L. Jones' Cedar Brand was second with Benjamin Smith's Buds third in the test for the National Bohemian Trophy. Breakable Miss paid $12.40 and was clocked in 1:27 3-5.

The day's feature event, the Conowingo Purse, found Lawless off slowly with the favored P. A. Rothfuss' Flicka Foot and the star 3-year-old finished fourth. E. L. Morsberger's Minaddie was the winner, under Jockey Jimmy Baird's handling, by a half length margin over A. S. Hammond's Count Display. Third money went to E. L. Miller's Belle.

Two-Mile Record Set

Minaddie was clocked in 1:20 for the six and a half furlongs and returned a $6 mutuel.

The day's steeplechase brought a new track record for the two-mile course. Mrs. S. B. Merryman's Makorbreak opened a long lead early and coasted home in time of 4:16 while ridden by Apprentice O. A. Brown. Frank Adams' Refugio was second with J. T. Moore's Battle Torch third. The winner, coupled with Mrs. E. L. Holton's Busy Moments, as the Trainer John Bosley, jr., entry, paid $4.20 in the favored role.

Robinson Will Never Forget Mother's Role in His Success

and there I never stopped believing that.

IN SPITE of the great love in her heart for her fellow human beings, my mother had a little room for hate. She hated intolerance. I remember that she never wanted me to go down South, even when I was in the Army.

She was afraid I would somehow get in trouble down there. She knew that I was always aggressive where intolerance was concerned and would always speak right out against it, though I think now that it is always better to reason a situation out thoroughly first.

It is bad enough to be heckled at a baseball game, though a player is supposed to be used to all kinds of insults. For some reason it is supposed to be a sporting tradition, though I suppose you could really call it a habit, a bad habit.

In this connection I learned a lesson from a fellow a long time ago. This fellow used a slurring remark to me about my race. It was at a junior college picnic and I got mad immediately and challenged him to a fight.

HE SORT of snapped out of it after the challenge and apologized to me immediately. Then he explained that he did not MEAN the intolerant remark he had made. He said it was just a bad habit with most people. He had a lot of sense for a young fellow and I accepted his apology and we shook hands in a very friendly way.

That kind of cooperation and understanding could do away with all the bigotry in the world. Maybe I am getting far away from baseball, but I'll say this: After you get on first base it takes a lot of cooperation and understanding on the part of your teammates to get you all the way home. That goes for baseball or the everyday business of living in a democracy.

Blood Banks Urged To Reject Drunks

Philadelphia, Aug. 22 (AP).—The president of the Women's Christian Temperance Union today urged charity blood banks to stop accepting "obviously unfit" blood from donors seeking money to buy liquor.

Mrs. D. Leigh Colvin told the annual WCTU convention the practice of selling blood for drinking funds has become prevalent among vagrants who term it "peddling the red."

Referring to an article by William J. Slocum in Collier's magazine, the WCTU head said the blood bank practices discussed were investigated by the temperance organization in Chicago.

"What our investigators knew to be true," Mrs. Colvin said, "was met with general denials by clinics and doctors.

"Nevertheless, most clinics using it certainly know where the blood comes from and banks take advantage of the donors by paying them as little as $3 a pint, sometimes up to $8, while the price of most leading hospitals for good blood is $25 to $50."

Earlier, Mrs. Colvin urged a thorough investigation of the report that Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan interceded for grain distillers seeking to have grain rationing relaxed.

She referred to a statement by Senator Mundit (R., S. Dak.), that a full inquiry is under way into the reports General Vaughan, President Truman's military aide, acted to obtain grain for distillers and brewers during the 1946 shortage.

The convention, in addition to reelecting Mrs. Colvin as president, today reelect Elizabeth A. Smart, Washington, D. C., as corresponding secretary.

Terrorism Try Alleged

man said the charge "was too ridiculous to talk about" and refused to make further comment.

Whitaker identified his informant concerning the Chicago visit as Dr. Willard Thompson, then president of the Chicago Medical Society.

Whitaker also denied charges that both in California and Minnesota an effort had been made to buy newspaper support of organized medicine's stand by paid advertising.

He said this was a "definite attempt to discredit newspaper advertising by people who do not agree with our way of life." The AMA, he said, was "not engaged in buying the press . . . When AMA issues an advertising schedule in support of this campaign, it will run in every paper in the country regardless of policy."

Whitaker was a member of a panel which included: Dr. E. L. Henderson, president-elect of the AMA; Dr. George F. Lull, general manager of the AMA; Dr. John Cline, member of the AMA coordinating committee, Leone Baxter, who is Whitaker's wife and business associate, and Dr. R. J. Gampell, a former general practitioner in Great Britain who left Britain because of opposition to Britain's national insurance scheme.

The AMA officials said they had nothing to hide in their campaign against compulsory health insurance.

"We have no high-priced lobby in Washington," said Whitaker. "We have a fine grass-roots lobby. We'll be proud to tell Congress what we're doing in this campaign and invite scrutiny of our books."

Whitaker said the total lobbying expenses as such on the Hill amounted to less than $15,000 a year. He said the setup here was a one-man office with the man, Fox Case, getting $12,000. Office expenses are about $600 a year, and the rent about $960.

Voluntary health insurance, they argued, was the answer to the Nation's health needs, Dr. Cline commenting that the "alleged unmet health needs are not even known accurately." Dr. Henderson announced that AMA was now undertaking "the first of a series of reports on the state of the Nation's health" which will be released within a year.

They boasted that nearly 61 million persons are now covered by voluntary health insurance, admitting that the coverage varied in the comprehensiveness. This figure, they promised, will increase sharply in the near future.

Dr. Gampell declared that the British plan was put over "by the filthiest piece of economic blackmail possible," and said that good medicine was absolutely impossible under the British scheme.

He complained that the British Medical Association, while opposing the plan, had no alternative scheme to offer to the people.

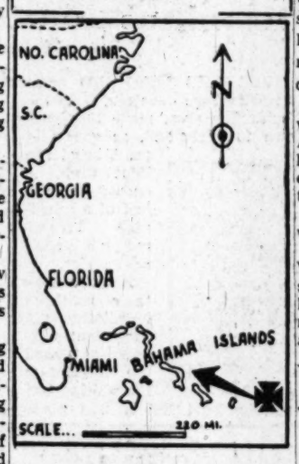
Hurricane 320 Mi. East Of Florida



Miami, Aug. 22 (AP)—A small but growing hurricane with winds up to 100 miles per hour was within 320 miles of Palm Beach tonight.

The first tropical storm of the season—dubbed "Harry's Hurricane" because it coincided with President Truman's visit to Miami—caused an alert to be sounded for the northeastern Bahama Islands.

The Weather Bureau warned residents in the northeastern Bahamas of possible high seas and dangerous gales late tonight and Tuesday.

Winds of about 100 miles an hour whirled around the storm's center, with gales extending outward about 100 miles on the northern semicircle.

No storm alerts have been posted anywhere in Florida, and forecasters pointed out that every effort is made to give 24 hours warning to an area which might become threatened.

A straightlined projection of the storm's path pointed it in the direction of the northern half of the Florida peninsula, but Weather Bureau men emphasized that hurricanes practically never follow a straight line.

A Navy hurricane hunter flew into the eye of the disturbance today and verified its north-northwestward path, its forward speed of about 17 miles an hour, and whirling winds of about 100 miles an hour.

Powerful Pacific 'Quake Reported Doing No Damage

Prince Rupert, B. C., Aug. 22 (U.P.)—An earthquake which lasted longer than the devastating shock in Ecuador and was stronger than the San Francisco quake of 1906 struck off the coast of British Columbia last night, but there were no reports of casualties or major damage.

The violent submarine temblor, was felt as far north as Juneau, Alaska, and as far south as Portland, Oreg., seismologists said. The quake would have been destructive had it not centered offshore.

The greatest shock felt on land was in the Skeena River Valley.

In Seattle, the University of Washington seismograph station said the severity of the quake knocked the needle off one seismograph drum. It lasted for six and a half hours. The Ecuador quake of August 5 was recorded in Seattle for four hours.

Prof. Perry Byerly, University of California seismologist, said it was "very large," the largest ever recorded in California from a distant point. He said it was more severe than the one which shook San Francisco in 1906.

The shock was felt at 8:03:27 p. m. (PST). Sitka, Petersburg and Juneau, Southeast Alaska points, said it was the dish-rattling, picture-shaking type. Another slight shock at 9:05 a. m. (PST) today was reported by Petersburg.

Plasterers' Strike Stays Deadlocked; Talks Fail

Negotiations Over Union Demand for Health Fund Slated To Continue Today

Negotiations yesterday between striking plasterers and contractors failed to break a deadlock over union demands for a health fund.

The strike, which began last Friday, continued as negotiators talked for two hours at the Hotel Hamilton. They will meet again at 2 p. m. today

Local 96, Operative Plasterers and Cement Finishers International Association (AFL), wants contractor employers to pay an amount equal to 2 per cent of employes' wages into a health and hospitalization fund for the workers.

The health program is the only point now in dispute. The Employing Plasterers Association, representing 18 contractors, has agreed to a union request for higher workmen's compensation payments in Virginia and Maryland jobs. Two other demands have been dropped by the union, and continuation of the $3-an-hour wage is agreed on.

No change was reported yesterday in the wage dispute between 175 AFL employes and the Smoot Sand & Gravel Corp., which may develop into a strike if not settled by Monday.

The employes, members of Local 77, International Union of Operating Engineers, and Local 639, Teamsters Union, want a wage increase of 25 cents an hour, and have rejected a company offer of group insurance.

Selection of Transit Arbitrators Delayed

Selection of arbitrators in the wage contract dispute between the Capital Transit Co. and its employes was delayed yesterday by withdrawal of one member of the panel from which the arbitrators are to be chosen.

The Federal Diary by Jerry Kluttz which was to have been resumed this morning, does not appear because Kluttz ended his vacation with a bad cold and is confined to his home.

Flood Control Plan Approved For Anacostia

A $4,531,200 flood control project for the Anacostia River in the District and nearby Maryland was authorized by the House yesterday.

The project was part of a $1,114,000,000 bill for flood control and water navigation projects which passed the House by a standing vote of 202 to 1. Senate action this session is doubtful, however.

The Anacostia project would eliminate about 95 per cent of all flood damage in the area, engineers estimate. The Bladensburg, Md., area has been subjected to repeated floods over the years.

The local project provides for a navigable channel in the Anacostia 80 feet wide and 8 feet below low water from 15th st. se. as far north as Bladensburg, with a recreational boat basin and commercial harbor at Bladensburg.

Flood control projects are scheduled for Bladensburg, Edmonston, Riverdale, Hyattsville, Brentwood, Cottage City and Colmar Manor, Md., by enlarging and realigning the river channel, erecting levees, pumping plants, a pressure conduit, replacement of one railroad bridge on the northeast branch and related work, according to Army Engineers.

The authorization measure provides no Federal funds shall be spent until local agencies have agreed to furnish the necessary land and make the needed sewer, road and other changes and agree to operate and maintain the recreation center "open to all on equal terms."

"Fashion Ripe Mentality"

Some Comic Books Help Lead To Subversion, Priest Charges

A Catholic priest declared here yesterday there was nothing "funny" about either some comics or their influence, and stressed also that they "form a pattern for totalitarian exploitation."

The Rev. Robert E. Southard, S. J., associate editor of the church publications, "The Queens Work" and "Action Now," said comic books fashion a mentality ripe for plucking by subversive influences.

Father Southard is one of 20 instructors of the 19th consecutive summer school of Catholic Action, now under way at Georgetown University.

"The vast following of funny books," he said, "shows a breakdown in real-life activity, and is an extremely serious situation. It is just one indication of the trend toward letting other people do things for us. It is spoon-fed entertainment, easy to take, but loaded with potential disaster."

He said their appeal was much the same as that of nazism or communism: "Make things simple, easy to grasp and not too deep, and keep pounding them in. Comics lessen a child's sense of responsibility and desire for achievement. They make him impatient of print, and education without pictures difficult."

But Father Southard, himself the author of a comic-boo': type publication on the life of Christ, said he was not condemning all comics. He mentioned specifically as bad those which gave unrealistic pictures of life, or distorted values.

He also decried the influence of comics as "textbooks" for crime. He recommended the study of comics be a school course to show youngsters why some are good and some are bad.

In another talk, the Rev. Louis J. Twomey, S. J., director of the Institute of Public Relations, Loyola University, New Orleans, La., said communism and democracy are in a death struggle, and only one will survive.

He condemned the emotionalism and Red-baiting which now tinge the viewpoint of too many anti-Communists.

Communism must be studied from its own documents, Father Twomey said, but added that it is equally important to know our own American scene and the inequalities and injustices in it on which communism thrives.

The traveling summer school of Catholic Action is sponsored by the central office of the Sodality in St. Louis, Mo. The Sodality is a religious organization composed largely of lay persons, which was founded in Rome 300 years ago when the church was under serious pressures because of social crisis. The lectures will continue through Friday both during the day and at night.

For 200 Miles

2 Canoeists Run Potomac To District

Two Richmond, Va., explorers pulled up at the Watergate last night after a 200-mile canoe trip over the Shenandoah and Potomac rivers, including a perilous passage of Great Bull Falls at Harper's Ferry.

I'm sleepy," was the first comment of 16-year-old high-schooler Bill Wagner, whose father, William F. Wagner, is chief of tuberculosis activities for the State of Virginia.

"I feel fine—now it's over with," said Bill Lamb, 22, premed student at the University of Virginia last spring and director of water activities at Camp Skymont.

From the camp, at Overall, Va., the youths pushed off in their 18-foot canoe at noon Friday, down the south fork of the Shenandoah to Front Royal, Va., down the Shenandoah to Harper's Ferry, down the Potomac to Washington—arriving at 6:15 last night. They were a day ahead of schedule.

"We're claiming a record for the trip," said Lamb, "at least until someone writes us he's done it before."

Lamb, who coxswained a Navy small boat at Okinawa, said they stopped counting when they had run 50 falls. Most dangerous was Great Bull Falls above Harper's Ferry.

"We must have been stuck 10 times on rocks," young Wagner, who was bow man, said.

The canoeists said that Camp Skymont officials tried to talk them out of the trip and even followed them along—by highway—clear to Charles Town, W. Va., meeting them at bridges and asking them if they didn't think maybe they'd had enough.

The boys had permission for the trip but "there must have been a hundred people tried to talk us out of it," Lamb said, "thinking it was too dangerous."

Man, 70, Sane, Faces Trial in 1939 Slaying

A 70-year-old man was declared sane yesterday and thereby won the right to fight against a first-degree murder indictment which has been pending against him for ten years.

He is Richard J. Colton, accused of the shotgun slaying of Joseph B. McKenna, 43, then of 3549 13th st. nw., in August, 1939. McKenna was shot in the back, police records show.

Shortly after the killing, Colton was committed to St. Elizabeth's Hospital and remained there until 1943, when the charge was dropped.

He walked out when he was transferred from the dormitory for the criminally insane and the indictment was reinstated.

He was rearrested in 1946 and was in St. Elizabeths until yesterday. The diagnosis was alcoholic psyehosis, paranoid reaction, hospital officials reported.

Police contended at the time that Colton believed that his wife was desired by McKenna. Colton also believed that his food was being poisoned, according to court papers.

Colton petitioned the court for a writ of habeas corpus. It was granted by Judge Jennings Bailey of District Court.

When the jurist asked him whether he knew that he might be trading the rest of his lifetime at St. Elizabeths for a gamble with the electric chair, Colton replied he was aware of this.

As to the crime, Colton said he had no recollection of it whatsoever. He was represented by Attorney H. Edward Chozick.

Marauders Get $200 From Safe In Garage Here

Thieves obtained $200 over the weekend from a safe in the Smith-Butler garage, 1409 17th st. nw., according to a report to police yesterday by E. W. Smith, proprietor.

The marauders entered through a skylight on the roof and used garage tools, including a crowbar, to knock the bottom from the safe.

G. R. Clay, manager of the Kedrick Grill, in the Kedrick Medical Bldg., 1801 K st. nw., reported $157 stolen from the place. It was hidden in a paper sack under a tray of table silver, he said.

Mt. Airy Man Says Ex-Wife Lashed Him

Sought Two Sons With Court Order; Asks Judge to Hold Her in Contempt

A Mount Airy, Md., farmer charged in a District Court petition yesterday that his former wife lashed him with a whip when he attempted to get his two sons from her under a court order.

The charge was made in a petition by John A. Moore, 43, one-time Washington businessman who wants his former wife, Mrs. Rose Barbara Moore, 39, adjudged in contempt of District Court.

Mrs. Moore several years ago obtained a divorce from Moore in Florida and then gave up her two sons to him after she stated she could no longer support them.

Since 1946, she has been striving in courts to get them back, but currently is allowed to see them only on alternate weekends and from July 1 to August 15.

On the latter date, Moore told the court, he went to get the boys from Mrs. Moore's apartment at 766 Princeton pl. nw.

He said that she "slammed the door on my face." He then repeated the request, the petition states, to have Mrs. Moore return with a souvenir whip and beat him with it as she cursed him.

According to his attorney, Charles Patton Henry, Mrs. Moore still has the children. The woman's conduct is "reprehensible and detrimental to the peace of mind and general welfare of the said children," Moore states.

Opinion Asked On District's License Scope

The Commissioners yesterday asked Corporation Counsel Vernon West to prepare a legal opinion on whether the District has the right to demand licenses for functions authorized by the Interior Department.

The thorny District-Federal issue cropped up last week when District Superintendent of Licenses Chatham T. Nottingham inquired why pools operated by Government Services, Inc., and the Washington Theater Festival at Meridian Hill Park—both under Interior Department authority—do not have licenses.

Nottingham had attempted to prosecute the pool operators when a Health Department inspector found deficiencies in some of the GSI pools.

He asked the city heads to direct West to draw up an opinion on "this apparently jurisdictional dispute."

The Interior Department has strongly objected to the city licensing requirement to permit health and building department inspections of services and functions it has authorized.

The Federal agency asked that any persecution be held in abeyance pending an opinion by Corporation Counsel West.

Plans for the division reunion to be held September 3 and 4 in Louisville, Ky., will be discussed. A special plane will leave Washington for the celebration Friday, September 2 and return on Labor Day.

The riders will also be shown films taken at the division's reunion in El Paso, Tex., last year.

Heed 'Rules and Regulations for Bicycling,' D. C. Admonishes in Launching Safety Drive

Recreation Dept. Traffic Council Issue Instructions

Boys and girls especially, but also grownups who use bicycles for work or play, take heed!

Here are some of the "Rules and Regulations for Bicycling" issued by the District Recreation Department and the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Council in connection with a bicycle safety campaign this week:

Know what every traffic sign signifies.

Keep to the right and close to the curb—especially in busy traffic.

Always come to a full stop before entering main streets and highways.

Don't ride abreast, but remain in single file.

Don't carry extra passengers.

For night riding, have headlight and rear reflector in proper condition.

Stay out of underpasses, car tracks or grooves.

Carry no extra cargo; place all cargo in the basket carriage.

If repairs are necessary, make them off the road.

Never hitch a ride with another vehicle.

Never ride out from between parked cars.

To make a left turn, extend your left arm outright. To make a right turn, your left arm is extended and from the elbow to the hand, the hand is placed upward with your thumb pointing to the right.

To stop or slow down, your left arm is extended and dropped almost to your side.

It is always a good policy to check your bicycle every morning before you ride it. Never use a faulty bicycle.

Hyattsville Boy Hurt in Bike Crash

A bicycle-riding 5-year-old boy got off with bruises and a good scare in Hyattsville yesterday when he collided with an auto and was pinned beneath his bike while the car passed over him.

The youngster was Jerry Blake of 5007 54th place. The accident occurred at the corner of Emerson st. and 55th ave., Hyattsville. Jerry was taken to Prince Georges General Hospital suffering from multiple bruises.

County police said it took neighbors nearly 15 minutes to extricate the boy from the bicycle under which he was pinned, after the auto passed over him without touching him.

Police identified the driver of the car as Charles H. Day, 19, of 5414 Emerson st., Hyattsville. He will appear in Hyattsville Police Court on Thursday to face a charge of reckless driving.

By Tom Kelley—The Washington Post

"DON'T CARRY PASSENGERS"—Giving someone a lift on a bicycle makes it hard to control and blocks the rider's view. This is explained by Robert Thompson, 10, and Ronald Kotulak, 9, who show what not to do at Georgetown Playground's "Theater on Wheels"

Takoma Park Adopts Pure Food Law

The mayor and city council of Takoma Park, Md., last night adopted strict regulations governing sanitation in food establishments.

Patterned after the District Health regulations, the ordinance prohibits sale of any impure, diseased, decayed or unwholesome foods.

Adoption of the ordinance was protested by John Zieler, attorney, on the grounds that the city is with out a health officer to carry out its enforcement.

The ordinance, among other provisions prohibits sale of perishable foods in the open, outside the confines of any building, within 18 inches of the surface of the ground or within 24 inches of the sidewalk.

It also provides that all store managers shall have their stores screened or protected by power-driven fans or provide adequate refrigeration to prevent insects from infesting foods.

Persons violating any of the provisions of the ordinance would be fined $5 to $25 for each offense.

Mayor John C. Post said Montgomery County health authorities would carry out inspections.

'Suprise' Visit

Mother, 82, To See Son, But Not Here

The 82-year-old mother of a Washington union official will have that visit with her son despite bypassing him halfway across the country, then being stranded without funds.

Mrs. Catherine Boyle, mother of William A. Boyle, president of United Mine Workers District 27, got lonesome at her home in Billings, Mont., and boarded a bus there Thursday for a surprise visit to her son.

She didn't know that Boyle wanted to see her, and had headed West about the time she left Billings.

Everything went smoothly for Mrs. Boyle until she reached Pittsburgh Sunday night. There her purse was stolen in the bus terminal restaurant.

Stranded without a cent, she sought police help, and was given a bed in the county jail infirmary. Police notified John Busarello, president of UMW District.

It wasn't until late yesterday that union officials in Washington located Boyle, half way to Billings.

Arrangements were made for Mrs. Boyle's return to Billings, where her son will be waiting.

Falls Church Protests to U. S. on Sewer

The Falls Church City Council last night urged the Federal Government to forestall proposed Fairfax County sewage system expansion on grounds it violates the Virginia State constitution.

The council said the plan would have the effect of raising charges now paid by the city for use of county facilities from $2 a year to $18 for each connection.

A resolution denouncing the program as a violation of the Virginia State constitution because it includes "overlapping charges for use and construction" was ordered sent to the Federal Works Agency and the Government Services Agency.

The Federal Government is in the picture because it owns a trunk line disposal system in Fairfax, which the county proposes to buy as part of its sewage program.

Accompanying the resolution will be a request that the Federal Government "stop the proposed transfer of said sewage system."

The council voted to request the Fairfax County Board of Supervisors to arrange a meeting of county and city officials to discuss the problem before county residents in Sanitary District No. 1 vote on the issue August 30.

Courthouse, New GAO Building Funds Voted

Park Commission, Housing, Potomac River Basin Money Also Appropriated

Five million dollars each for the new Federal courthouse and the new General Accounting Office Building were voted by Congress yesterday in sending the Independent Offices appropriation bill to the White House. Work already is under way on both structures.

Other District agencies included in the bill were:

National Capital Park and Planning Commission—$20,000 for printing its master plan and $695,000 to purchase park, parkway and playground sites.

National Capital Housing Authority—$34,900 for maintaining and operating its properties.

Interstate Commission on the Potomac River Basin—$5000.

$7578 Lien Filed Against Speculator

An income tax lien of $7758.62 has been filed against Ralph W. Moore, Washington and Texas commodity speculator, currently under indictment on charges of violating antilobbying laws, it was revealed in District Court yesterday.

An identical lien was also placed against Moore's wife, Mrs. Lois A. Moore.

The Government claims against the Moores involve income taxes covering 1945-1947 inclusive.

"Income taxes for those years were paid," Moore said yesterday. "These liens are for taxes in controversy—certain items were disallowed."

The indictment against Moore charges he failed to register as a lobbyist despite the fact that he was carrying on lobbying activities to maintain and increase the price of grains.

A second count charged Moore and three others with conspiracy to violate the antilobbying laws.

Trial on the charges is still pending.

A lien demanding $1809.97 was filed against the Consolidated Contracting Co., Inc., whose address was given as 3217 12th st. se. Records showed no such listing at that address. The claim was for withholding taxes and Federal insurance contribution for 1948 and 1949.

An income tax assessment was levied against Matthew G. Jones, 1850 47th pl. nw., for 1947 in the amount of $1237.38. Jones was not available for comment.

At this time last year there were 37 reported cases of polio in Washington.

Ninety-four cases of polio have been reported in the Washington metropolitan area by health officers so far this year. Six deaths have been reported from the disease in the same period.

District—35.
Prince Georges County—26.

3-Day Show at Gaithersburg

Montgomery County Fair Opens Thursday After Long Lapse

By William H. Smith
Post Reporter

Montgomery County returns to the southern Maryland "county fair circuit" this week after a lapse of 20 years.

A three-day agricultural exhibit will open at 9 a. m. Thursday on a newly developed show site at Gaithersburg. Local farm folk hope it will be the first step toward revival of the colorful fairs held annually in Rockville until the depression in 1929. The fairs have never been resumed, although small-scale livestock shows in the last four years have indicated a mounting interest in agricultural competition.

Scene of this year's fair is a 64-acre site purchased and developed by the Montgomery County Cooperative Agricultural Center, formed during the last year by farmers and others interested in restoring the county fair to its stature of two decades ago. The group eventually contemplates a $250,000 development, complete with a lake for swimming and boating, a pall park and picnic area, along with permanent buildings for fair exhibits.

By Thursday, nine of the fair buildings will have been completed—at virtually no cost to the organization. Labor, materials, machinery and equipment all have been donated, to provide facilities conservatively valued at $150,000.

R. M. Whipp, assistant county agent and secretary of the cooperative, took time out from his supervision of volunteer workers at the show grounds yesterday to point out some of the highlights of the layout. In turn he indicated a 10-acre grove of trees soon to become a picnic area, a newly graded baseball field complete with powerful lights for night games and an acre-and a half, man-made depression that will become a lake, fed by three nearby springs.

"The time, labor and equipment represented in the grading of the land alone probably would have amounted to $50,000 at present-day construction costs," Whipp said. It cost the center nothing.

Although this week's fair is planned as just a "starter" toward bigger and better programs, according to Whipp, it will be a full-scale event. The three-day program will include most of the attractions to be found at established county fairs in Maryland, and cash awards are expected to total between $6000 and $7000.

Competitive events will include a wide range of livestock classes, home arts, farm machinery and a horse-pulling contest, supplemented by special junior classes for girls and 4-H Club members. An added feature will be a horse show on Saturday.

Beside the usual agricultural events, there will be a carnival with rides for children and other entertainment. Refreshments will be available at the grounds.

Accused in Theft

River Yields Body of Brig Escapee

Jack Martin's bid for freedom from the brig aboard the excursion boat SS Bear Mountain last Friday night cost him his life.

His body was found floating in the Potomac River near the plant of the Braddock Light & Power Co., north of Alexandria. He was identified by an acquaintance, H. J. Miller, 1422 N st. nw., from tattoo marks. Police said Martin lived at 415 Randolph st. nw.

He was arrested aboard the boat for allegedly stealing money from a pocketbook. He broke a wire mesh protection on a porthole of the brig, police were informed, and plunged into the river, about 50 yards from the east shore. The boat was stopped at the time, but Martin was arrested by Detective Sergt. Ralph Creel of the District Police general assignment squad, who was off duty and on the cruise. The body was found, according to Harbor police, almost directly across the river from the point where Martin plunged off the boat. The channel, they said, is about a mile wide at that point. The boat was only about 100 yards from the District shore when Martin leaped, officers said.

he disappeared. Officers then theorized he had swam ashore. Yesterday, they believed he lost his direction in the water, swimming westward toward Alexandria. The body was clad only in underwear and shoes.

Officers said he was at liberty on $1000 bond on a charge of assaulting an off-duty policeman on March 27.

As she did, the mother said, wind moved the barges apart and the daughter attempted to jump from one to the other but missed. Harbor police and a Fire Department Rescue Squad recovered the body an hour later.

Summer Bible Conference Attracts Estimated 70,000

By Martha J. Hall
Post Reporter

Massanetta Springs, Va., Aug. 22.—Officials of the Massanetta Springs Bible Conference estimate that by the end of this week a total of 70,000 persons will have attended this year's summer conferences here.

Eleven separate conferences have been held. One was sponsored by the Virginia Board of Education, one by the Virginia Christian Endeavor, one by the Lutheran Church, three by Baptist groups and the remainder by the Synod of Virginia of the Presbyterian Church in the United States, which owns the conference grounds.

Conferences Began June 10

Conferences during the early part of the season, which began June 10, were for specific groups such as young people, women and laymen. Later conferences were of more general nature.

Highlight of the year's activity is the annual interdenominational Bible conference and school for pastors, which entered its second and final week today.

Families from 32 States, from California to Alabama to Connecticut, representing 19 Protestant denominations, have been attending this year's sessions, officials said.

In addition to general meetings there are special morning discussion groups for church women and ministers. For the children there is a full-time vacation Bible school.

Taken Over by Synod in 1922

Originally a summer resort, Massanetta Springs was taken over by the Virginia Presbyterian Synod in 1922. That year there were five conferences on the grounds. Since then an estimated half million persons have come to the summer religious and educational meetings.

The tree-shaded grounds in the Shenandoah Valley cover nearly 220 acres. In addition to a four-story brick hotel which houses 450 persons, there are 38 privately owned cottages owned by individuals and churches. A few families stay in house trailers, and others stay in tourist homes in nearby Harrisonburg.

Center of activities during the conferences is a white frame auditorium, open on the sides, where general meetings are held. The building also contains class rooms for meetings and discussion groups.

On the grounds there are recreation facilities such as a swimming pool fed from mountain spring water, a bowling alley, tennis and badminton courts.

Each day's schedule during the interdenominational conference includes two morning and two evening speakers. Following the evening meeting there are special musical and dramatic programs. Afternoons are free for recreation and study.

On Sundays, three services attract thousands of visitors who drive to Massanetta Springs from surrounding States.

Certain days during the conference are designated denominational days, with leaders from the denomination as the speakers. Today, for example, was Baptist day, Wednesday will be Methodist day, Friday Presbyterian day, and Saturday Lutheran day.

Dr. William E. Hudson, retired Presbyterian minister from Staunton, Va., one of the founders of the conference, is director of the program for the interdenominational conference. He is assisted by Miss Ruth C. Campbell, executive director, and H. H. Wood, treasurer.

Speakers this Friday, Saturday, and Sunday will include Dr. Oscar H. Blackwelder, pastor of Reformation Lutheran Church, Washington, Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, pastor of Central Methodist Church, Detroit, and Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York.

Boggs Called 'Incompetent' By Fired Aide

By The Associated Press

J. Fred Kirchner yesterday labeled Edmund M. Boggs a mouthpiece for the Duke report, and charged the Virginia State Commissioner of Labor and Industry is incompetent and unsatisfactory for the position.

Kirchner, who was discharged by Boggs last week as director of the Labor Department's division of apprentice training, further charged in a statement that one section of the Duke report "is a direct attempt to abolish the Labor Department."

The report referred to is a survey of the State Department of Labor and Industry prepared by Governor Tuck's reorganization staff, headed by Charles Duke.

"Boggs knows nothing of the Department of Labor and Industry other than what he is told by others, who want to make the Duke report stand up," Kirchner said.

"I readily recognize Mr. Boggs as being incompetent and unsatisfactory for the Commissioner of Labor position, because of his inability to decipher the few labor laws we have."

Kirchner charged "this is a direct attempt to abolish the Labor Department as Governor William M. Tuck desired in his reorganization bill in the General Assembly of 1948, which was rejected."

Republicans Assail Social Security Plan

By the United Press

Republican members of the House Ways and Means Committee asserted yesterday that the Social Security revision bill supported by the Democratic majority may result in a complete breakdown of the system.

The group of 10 said they approve many features of the Administration bill but are opposed to increasing the cost of the program to the extent proposed.

"The provisions we oppose will increase the cost of this system at its maturity by approximately $3,500,000,000 a year, and this amount, when added to the huge and pyramiding cost of the other features of the program, may well mean the difference between the success or breakdown of the system," the Republicans said in their minority report.

The Ways and Means Committee approved the Social Security bill last week by a vote reported to be 22 to 3. Three Republicans were understood to have voted against it, the remaining seven voting to send it to the floor.

Woman's Future Bright, Georgia Clark Tells Girls' Nation

Rep. St. George Assails Government 'Corruption'

REPRESENTATIVE Katharine St. George last night attacked "Government corrpution" in a speech at the opening session of Girls Nation held at American University.

"The trouble with our government today is that it is corrupt and we are in a fair way to having it become absolutely so," she told 98 delegates from 47 States and the Panama Canal Zone who have gathered here for a seven-day citizenship training course sponsored by the American Legion Auxiliary.

While in town the teenagers will study the national Government and the citizens' responsibility for its functioning.

People Losing Interest?

"We hear of the scandals of obtaining government contracts through that great army of influence peddlers known as the 5-percenters, and we laugh," said the New York Congresswoman.

According to the Republican lawmaker, a government elected by universal suffrage and majority rule becomes corrupt when people lose interest in their government and take the attitude that dishonesty in public officials is a joke—a thing to be expected and certainly no cause for righteous indignation.

"This is the situation today in the United States," she said. She charged women with failure to contribute to better government since coming of political age some 29 years ago.

Sees No Discrimination

Speaking on the same program, United States Treasurer Georgia Neese Clark declared that she did not subscribe to the belief that women are objects of discrimination.

"In government, in business, in the arts and professions, women have proved adequately their ability to compete," she said, "Today they occupy positions of great responsibility in all walks of life, and their accomplishments form an important chapter in the history of the times."

Asserting that woman has attained full stature in this free land, Mrs. Clark said, "her (woman's) future is anything she cares to make it."

Praising the American Legion Auxiliary's sponsorship of Girls Nation, Mrs. Clark stated "We in Washington are inspired by the presence of such a fine cross-section of America's youth. And it is our hope that this visit to the seat of your government will prove helpful, when in a few short years you assume the responsibilities of full citizenship."

"For, the future of the United States, I firmly believe, depends in large measure upon the interest in democratic government, and the understanding of it shown by the country's rising generation."

During the day the youthful delegates visited the Capitol, the Supreme Court Building and the Department of Justice. Emory Frazier, Chief Clerk of the Senate, gave the girls pointers on how to organize a Senate.

Highlights of today's events will be a talk by Representative Kenneth B. Keating, 11 a. m., and an address on the Atlantic Pact by Senator Alexander Wiley, 8:15 p. m. Aspirants to the presidency of Girls Nation also will give brief talks.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Wife Backs Husband for Seven Years While He Fights Against Love of Another Woman, And Now Feels Too Tired to Care About Him

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Tom and I have been married 25 years and have four children. Tom has his own business and we both worked very hard to establish it; and we were very happy, with all our hard work, until 10 years ago, when Tom fell in love with another woman.

Jane and her husband were in our circle of close friends and I thought a lot of her. She and Tom had been seeing each other secretly for about three years before I began to suspect. Then Tom and I talked it over—because we always discussed things reasonably—and he said it "just happened," and if I would be patient and help him, he would try to overcome his love of Jane.

We agreed, for the sake of appearances, to continue the friendship; and Tom also said if he didn't see Jane in a group, he would want to continue to see her alone—and he thought seeing her in company would hasten the "cure." Nobody will ever know what I went through after that—forever pretending that things were just dandy, when all the while I was heartsick.

Husband Also Has Changed for Worse

I STUCK to Tom all the way through, helping him every way I knew how; never once quarreling and doing my best to win him back. Now it seems I've accomplished that—which I wanted most of all—but this last six months I've grown awfully tired. I can't seem to get enough rest; and if this continues I just know I'm going to lose him again; and what startles me is that I just don't seem to care.

Tom also has changed. He is very irritable and restless and can't seem to relax. Although we don't quarrel (we never have), something is gone. Can you explain what's wrong with me? Why don't I care what happens any more, after putting up such a mental battle for so long? Now that the goal is won, have I lost my love for Tom?

Don't tell me to see a psychiatrist; I've already consulted two, and both of them say I'm perfectly all right; that there is nothing wrong that a little rest won't cure. What do you think is the trouble? Can you suggest anything to put a little of the old spirit back in me? A. S.

A Shock Reaction Common to Women

DEAR A. S.: Maybe you've heard of the housewife in Holland who didn't know a circus lion was loose; but she came upon him in her kitchen, tracking mud around; and in a flash she grabbed up a broom and angrily scooted him into the street. Then she slammed the door and fell in a faint.

It is a common experience, with women especially, to face dangerous emergencies with superhuman stamina and then collapse in a shock reaction in the safe aftermath.

A sedative for the nerves, to bring about a restorative amount of sleep and rest, is the common cure for shock reaction in average cases; and this treatment was often sufficient, during the war, to bring battle-shocked soldiers back to normal—but you need something more.

You've been under critically severe, dreadfully prolonged strain lasting seven years, trying to keep up appearances and seem most charming when you never felt worse. And in this time you've been inwardly ravaged not only by fear of losing Tom, but also by bottled-up rage at him and Jane, that you didn't dare admit even to yourself, much less ventilate openly.

Ventilate Rage; Take a Holiday

NATURALLY, then, you are seriously tired; and as the dangerous crisis seems on the wane, you are involuntarily "letting go" and "feeling the effects." The truth is, you just aren't able to care vitally about anything in your present state; and you need both rest and psychological help to revive your spirit.

Your psychiatric consultants took a pretty shallow inventory of your condition, in failing to help you bring out and discursively dissolve your bottled-up rage, which you've been afraid to face—for it is a great weight on your spirit and tax on your energies still. But maybe "The Healing Light," Agnes Sanford's therapeutic book (Macalaster Park Publishers), will help in this, since they did not.

Also, you should if possible get completely away from Tom and home-surroundings for a six weeks' holiday in a bracing atmosphere, "next to nature," at seaside or in the mountains, as you prefer—where plenty of rest and opportunity to stretch your eyes to far horizons will gently repair frayed nerves and induce healthy perspective on personal frets. Miss Sheila Whelan of Sheffield, England, is one of 97 British Exchange teachers visiting in Washington. She will leave tomorrow for Corona, Calif., where she will teach first grade children

U. S. Hospitality, Nylons Impress British Teacher

By Genevieve Reynolds

WHEN Miss Sheila Whelan of Sheffield, England, went on her first buying spree in New York last Friday, she purchased a pair of pink nylon stockings.

"The pink nylons are sheer luxury," says the tall, attractive English schoolmarm. She is one of 97 British exchange teachers who will spend a year in this country while an American teacher fills her post in her native land.

After a bit of sightseeing in Washington Saturday, the young instructor visited Sears & Roebuck, ended up purchasing a tiny inexpensive camera. "We have no store comparable to that one in England," she said.

As for Washington, Miss Whelan finds it larger than she had anticipated. "It's beautiful and almost a continuous garden of trees and flowers."

While she likes the fresh fruits, abundance of food and clothing which she sees in the stores, she is most impressed with people's helpfulness and hospitality. Wherever she turns, people say, "Excuse me. What part of England are you from? I was over here during the War." Then all offer her assistance. That has been her pleasant experience since arriving in this country August 19 on the Queen Elizabeth.

At the conclusion of a three-day orientation and briefing course on American teaching methods at American University, Miss Whelan will leave for Corona, Calif., where she will teach the fifth grade. En route she hopes to stop over in Denver, Col., with Miss Jean Hendry of Sheffield, who will teach the first grade in the city schools there.

In Corona, she will live in the middle of an orange grove. The school's medical officer has offered Miss Whelan free accommodations in her home for the school term. "I'll have to learn to cook," says Sheila. "I've never tried. But with your wonderful gadgets and can openers, perhaps it won't be too difficult."

"American salads are wonderful and I have never seen such variety," Miss Whelan says, recalling the massive and numerous salads she found in the United Nations' cafeterias at Lake Success. "British salads usually consist of a tired lettuce leaf, a slice of cucumber and tomato. Hence I have concluded that until sampling your kind, I didn't know salads."

After graduating from Notre Dame High School in Sheffield, she completed her education at Mount Pleasant Training College in Liverpool. Throughout World War II, she was in college and had very little opportunity to meet the Yanks.

Prior to coming to the United States, Miss Whelan taught in a special open air school in Sheffield. The students were physically defective or psychologically difficult cases. The school concentrated on handicrafts.

Cooking Cue . . .

Fresh shrimp should be cooked carefully—not too long, in a small amount of water. Put a cup of water in a heavy saucepan with a tightly fitting cover and add three or four peppercorns, the top of a celery stalk, a bay leaf, and a teaspoon of salt; bring to a boil and simmer for about five minutes. Now add a pound of shrimp, bring rapidly to a boil again, cover, and simmer for about 5 minutes for small or medium shrimp. Jumbo shrimp may require a few minutes extra cooking time. Drain, peel, and remove the black vein with a small sharp knife.

Fewer Fur-Trimmed Coats Worn This Fall

By The Associated Press

Women will be wearing fewer fur trimmed coats this fall, Commerce Department statistic-collectors indicates.

They came out with a study of women's, misses' and juniors' outerwear industries, and only fur trimmed coats showed fewer cuttings in the first quarter of 1949 than in the same period last year. The department said the reduction was a slashing 60 percent.

The trend toward lower-priced garment lines was continued by manufacturers as they made goods which will show up on retail counters months later.

"For all garments, except fur-trimmed coats, a higher proportion of output fell in the lowest price classes during first quarter 1949 than during the same quarter of last year," the department said.

Some four million more dresses priced to sell under $6 at wholesale were cut in first quarter 1949 than a year ago. In the highest price class, cuttings were reduced by two million dresses.

A general increase in cuttings of women's coats, suits and dresses came while sales for the first quarter 1949 fell 27 million dollars below the corresponding period of 1948. Total sales by the manufacturers were $700,000,000.

INTO her suitcase—the one she will take to college—are going her best bibs and tuckers. Among these she tucks her own special choice of fragrances—colognes, perfumes, bath powders, soaps and oils. Like herself, they are young, airy and lovely, and expressive of her own personality and the kind of life she leads

Fragances for the College Miss

By Peggy Preston

PERFUME is not a big item with the average college miss. But the allied fragrances are. Cologne, bath soap and oil, dusting powder are all important to her, ranking alongside her few precious drops of perfume.

It is to her advantage to know the fragrance that best suits her, and how to select it. So, although class room hours are still a few weeks away, she might harken to the lecture passed along to us by Miriam Gibson French of the Fragrance Foundation, Inc. Here are her rules for selection:

YOU, YOURSELF MUST LIKE the fragrance. It must not be one someone has suggested or recommended.

IT SHOULD EXPRESS your personality, for it it the moct personal of all accessories. You are remembered by it long after the color of your frock is forgotten.

IT SHOULD BE SUITABLE to the occasion, just as the hat or shoes you wear. Would you wear loafers to a formal dance?

A spicy fragrance is suitable with spectator sports clothes that you wear to football or basketball games. A floral scent is best with filmy evening gowns.

BEFORE PURCHASING, try the fragrance on your own skin. What may be wonderful on someone else can be all wrong for you, because the chemistry of your skin may change the overtones or undertones of the cologne, oil or perfume.

Even Youngsters Like to Be Proud of Clothes

Vanity belongs not only to grownups. Children have vanity, too—especially about their clothes. Perhaps to a squirming baby, clothes are a nuisance, but from the age of 3, dresses and suits become the source of pleasure and pride, according to Dr. Elizabeth Hurlock, author of the recently-published book, "Child Growth and Development" (Whittlesey House).

When Dr. Hurlock talks about children, having two of her own, she is interested in the practical as well as the psychological side of children's clothing.

In teaching a child to dress himself, she suggests, start by teaching him to undress himself—clothes are easier to pull off than to pull on. By the fifteen or eighteenth month, boys and girls should be able to start the dressing process.

Important Psychologically

As soon as a child becomes conscious of clothes, he begins to identify himself with them. Clothes he is proud to wear bolster his morale, but clothes that cause his friends to make fun of him, give rise to feelings of inferiority.

When Dr. Hurlock's own daughters went to dancing school, she waited to see what the other girls were wearing before she made or bought new dresses for their wardrobes. She realized how important it is to a child to "look like the others."

Letting a child or teen-ager choose his own clothing with mother and father's guidance, she feels is especially important. Then the child feels happy and secure with his comrades.

By helping the adolescent to learn how to make himself more attractive, a mother can prevent feelings of inferiority developing. Schools are stressing clothing courses today that help teen-agers learn good taste in dressing.

Tips for the Summer Bride

WHEN you say "thank you," do address and direct notes to the "Mrs." when writing to a married couple who contributed to your worthy cause. You may mention her husband, if you wish, but usually "you" is understood to mean "you both."

WANT to step up the tempo of a small informal wedding breakfast? As a centerpiece use a small pineapple, vari-colored grapes and red raspberries. Heap in a wooden bowl with grapeleaves interspersed and let them spill out on the cloth. Serve melon slices with wedges of lime, coddled eggs and chicken livers in cups, blueberry muffins and steaming coffee.

Cooking Cues

Hamburg steak is good broiled with tomato halves, mushrooms, slices of boiled sweet potato and bacon slices. This makes a good "one-dish" dinner. Serve a green salad with it and a fruit-and-cooky dessert.

A delightful menu for a summer luncheon party features chicken sandwiches with tomato aspic on salad greens. Dessert might be fresh blueberry pie a la mode with frosted coffee.

A tasty warm-weather sandwich filling is made by softening a small package of cream cheese, seasoning it with a little onion juice and mixing it well with about a half cup of finely chopped watercress.

Mashed ripe bananas are excellent for the young child in both nutrition and as a bone builder. The bananas must be a rich ripened yellow, though, with no green tips at the end. Substitute them for the usual orange juice once or twice a week.

British Women Live Longer Than Men, Survey Reports

London.—(AP).—A woman's chances of living to be 80 are twice as good as a man's in Britain. Statistics taken from the latest population report, the registrar-general's return for the quarter ended March 31, 1949, give this picture:

In the age group 20 to 40 the sexes run neck and neck. There are 6,564,000 men and 6,541,000 women, including those in the armed forces. But at 40 the women start to run ahead. And from 60 onwards the "weaker" sex outnumber the males by a million—3,906,000 to 2,910,000.

It's in the 80 and upwards group, however, that the ladies really hit their stride. They number 412,000, while the most the old gents can muster are 228,000. The return also showed a decrease in the British infant mortality rate to 40 per 1000 live births. The rate was 41 in the corresponding period a year ago and an average of 64 for the first quarters of the previous 10 years.

About Installing Safety Locks

To Worried Mother: There is a motor company in Anacostia that installs locks that latch the doors (all except the driver's) automatically when they are closed. You can then open the doors only afte rpressing a button on the dashboard. C. L. G.

The motor company C. L. G. mentions advises that besides installing these push-button, vacuum-type safety locks, they also handle the new safety control handles referred in P. H. T.'s letter yesterday. The number of the company is Axminster 4100.

How can I get rid of mold on matting (squares) porch rug?
T. N. B.

If the mold has not caused dark stains, it can probably be removed by sponging the squares with soap and water. Use a brush to get down into the fibers of the rug. If this doesn't completely remove it, cover the dampened rug-squares (be sure to completely remove soap first) with powdered starch and salt and let stand in sun to dry. Brush salt-starch mixture away when completely dry. To remove the musty odor and prevent future mildew, spray the thoroughly dry rug with a solution designed for ridding articles of mildew and odor from it. This product is obtainable in the housewares departments. Follow directions for applying which come with the product you buy.

How can brown spots be removed from linens which have been packed and stored for some time? F. P.

The only way these stains can be removed, if they can be removed, is to use a bleach. First soak the linens in clear water for 15 minutes to loosen the stains and then put them in a solution of two tablespoons of bleach to one quart of water for 15 minutes. Wash and rinse well in clear water. Or, another way to bleach them is to add a cup of household bleach to a washer full of soapy water in which you wash them. Wash 10 minutes and rinse three times in clear water to remove every trace of bleach.

I have constructed some bar stools and I wish to upholster the seats with with foam rubber. I have been unable to locate a source of this material to date. Can you advise me where I can purchase some foam rubber sheeting about one-inch thick for this purpose? P. L. C.

One of the large Washington department stores which is located on F st. between 10th and 11th sts. sells this type of rubber by the square foot in the upholstery fabric department. Since you write from out of town, you may order it by mail by writing to the Personal Shopping Service at that store. It is available in several widths, including one inch.

We wish to paint an old house in a Southern State which has not been painted since 1922. We have thought of using the now fashionable barn red; but should not the wood be treated with something before the paint is applied? Any information you can give us on the subject will be appreciated. E. C. M.

If there should be any loose or peeling paint left on the surface this should be removed by scraping and the surface brushed well before new paint is applied.

When thus prepared, the wood should then be treated with a good priming coat of paint to fill the wood well with oil before applying paint as it comes from the can. Since it hasn't been painted for so long, the wood is probably very dried out and you may have to go over the surface twice with a thin priming coat to fill the pores sufficiently to give a good paint foundation. For this first coat, use the directions recommended by the paint manufacturers as the method may vary with the paint. In general for mixing the priming coat, mix each gallon of paint with one pint of raw linseed oil and one-half pint of turpentine. If the old paint is chalky, the turpentine may be increased up to one and one-half pints for a gallon of paint so it will be thin enough to penetrate well. Let the priming coat dry two days before applying the outer coats. You will probably need at least two outer coats of paint just as it comes from the can to get a good durable finish.

I am interested in obtaining information about sea nettle netting for a small area. I'd like to know the type of netting used, cost (approximate), installation and maintenance required. J. S. W.

I suggest you write direct to the Fish and Wildlife Service, Department of the Interior, Washington, D. C., for this information. In addition to general information about the netting, they can provide you with the addresses of commercial firms who sell the netting.

I have a vanity which appears to be antique and which because of markings made by a rubber stamp seems to have been brought from France. Is there some way of having this piece appraised without cost or for a very nominal fee? Also, if it is valuable, how could I arrange to dispose of it most advantageously? L. B. C.

I have not been able to find a firm which would appraise the piece without cost. However, several of the firms listed under "Appraisers" in the yellow pages of the telephone book will come to your house and appraise the piece for approximately $7.50 to $10. These same firms have salesrooms and may be able to sell it for you. Their sales commission will be 10 to 15 per cent of the sale price. Or, after you have it appraised, you may wish to advertise it in The Washington Post to find a buyer.

I would suggest that you phone some of the firms listed under "Appraisers" and discuss the subject with them. When you give them a more complete description of the piece than you have given me, they may be able to tell you if it would pay you to have it appraised.

Could you tell he how to remove ointment from rayon silk nightgowns? One gown has been laundered, one has not. P. O. D.

You might start by rubbing clear lard or vaseline into the stain to soften and then sponge it with carbon tetrachloride. Before applying the carbon tetrachloride, rub the vaseline well into the fabric by rubbing between the fingers. This can be repeated if some, but not all of the ointment is removed the first time.

If this doesn't completely remove the stain, use sodium perborate, a bleach. Dampen the stain with water, dust on the perborate and rub between the fingers. Let stand 30 minutes and rinse thoroughly. Repeat, if necessary.

In Hollywood, You Can Buy Fur Sweaters

By Gloria Yarbrough

Beverly Hills, Calif., Aug 22 (AP). Ermine sweaters are now available for the pinup girls.

Made with wool knit waists, cuffs and V-necks, the ermine crew sweater was viewed at Al Teitelbaum's collection of 1950 furs. A sleeveless sweater of green moleskin, also shown, was middy-length and featured front pockets.

Suits were made of white and ebony broadtail. Fur skirts were topped with lowcut wool jersey bodices. The ebony cape was lined with the vivid lime jersey of the bodice. Jet black embroidery gave dramatic emphasis to the white fur suit.

An apron of fur was designed to transform simple dresses to important costumes. Called a "Smithy" apron, it is made of black Russian broadtail.

Jackets and coats were made of every conceivable length; waist, hipbone, fingertip, knee, walking and full length. Capes that look like jackets in front had loose flaring backs.

Stoles took the spotlight. Tiered stoles with two or three layers of fur, draped stoles with one end shaped to a sleeve, and belted stole with nipped-in waist and flared peplum, were novel attractions.

A coat called "feathery monkey pelerine" looked not unlike its hairy namesake. The description read, "a 1920 revival calculatingly planned with skins in reverse. We really don't underwrite this for general wear, but thought it was fun to upset our simian friends."

Teitelbaum cleverly combined different furs for dramatic effect. A gray Russian broadtail coat was boldly accented with silver blue mink. A border of long haired black fox was featured on a black broadtail stole.

Coat collars were usually of the standup or neck-hugging variety. A few were slit in the back to form a V-neck line in reverse. An after-five coat of white mink had a shoulder length cape collar.

One coat featured a sash which could double as a stole. A mink brief wrap had elbow length sleeves. Another was a generous length of mink which narrowed to wrist sleeves.

For Insomnia Try These Sleep Inducers

Try taking deep breathing exercises before an open window before retiring.

Avoid that little "snack" before retiring. It may seem little, but it is enough to ruin the night.

Be sure your feet are warm when retiring. If necessary, wear a pair of woilen bed socks when sleeping.

Unless reading in bed makes you sleepy, avoid reading a half hour in bed when retiring. Usually the person suffering from insomnia will grow more wide awake as he or she reads.

If all things fail, consult your family doctor. He may prescribe a light sleep inducer that is not harmful or habit-forming, but will just take away that feeling of tension that is the cause of not getting to sleep easily.

Men Like Strawberry Pie

There's something extra special about strawberry pie that puts a gleam in a man's eye.

Blend together 2-3 cup sugar, 1 tbsp. flour, 1-4 tsp. salt. Add to softened gelatine. Mix thoroughly. Place over medium flame stirring constantly until gelatine is dissolved and mixture is thickened, then remove from flame. Add 1 cup crushed strawberries, 2 tbsps. lemon juice. Chill until mixture is slightly thicker than consistency of unbeaten egg whites. Local Savings Increase 9% In S. & L. Units

By S. Oliver Goodman

Savings in Washington's 27 savings and loan associations increased 9 per cent in the 12 months ended July 31.

The institutions reported combined share accounts at the end of July aggregated $307,519,696, a new all-time high and a gain of $25,618,931 for the year.

Resources amounted to $355,352,811, also a new record and a gain of about nine million dollars during the period.

More than 232,000 individuals maintained savings or borrowing accounts with the local associations, according to the District of Columbia Building and Loan League.

League officials pointed out that during the past 12 months member groups have retired a large part of advances from the Federal Home Loan Bank, and still had ample funds to take care of applications for new housing loans.

MAYFLOWER NET UP: The Mayflower Hotel Corp. of Washington showed net profit of $355,035 during the first six months this year, compared with $343,273 in the same 1948 period. The Mayflower is operated by the Hilton Hotels Corp., which owns 69.57 per cent of the local hotel's outstanding stock. Hilton reported net income of $2,061,678 for the first half, against $2,094,839 in the like period last year. Of the hotel chain's $1.28 a share net in the first half, its equity in the Mayflower contributed 16 cents a share.

AUTO OUTLOOK: "The Nation's auto dealers will have a lot of new cars to sell in September, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Detroit. So far there has been no material drop in sales, but most industry sources look for a levelling off after the end of August. More than 545,000 new cars are expected to be shipped from the factories this month. That will give the Nation's 40,000 dealers a substantial inventory to dispose of. Right now, estimates place the field stock at about 500,000 units.

2-MONTH STOCKPILE: Although steel consumption in the Washington area is running at record levels, a steel strike would not be immediately crippling to many local operations, according to a survey by the Fred S. Gichner Iron Works here. Indications are that overall stocks on hand would be sufficient for more than two months' consumption at present high rates.

ODD LOTS: The creeping advance in steel mill operations remained unbroken this week with mill production scheduled at 84.8 per cent of capacity, against 83.5 per cent last week . . . In line with other companies, Sun Oil Co. yesterday increased price of home heating oil by 0.3 to 0.7 of a cent a gallon . . . Potomac Electric Power Co. common closed at 14⅝ yesterday on the New York Stock Exchange, a new all-time peak . . . Commerce Dept. reported that retail sales in July held within 1 per cent of June, but were 4.5 per cent under July, 1948 . . . Agriculture Dept. yesterday issued an order, effective Wednesday, placing the California dried prune industry under controls designed to keep price-depressing surpluses off the market.

ADVANCE NOTICE: Virtually all Washington railroad ticket offices and freight departments will be closed on Saturdays, starting September 3. It's the result of a five-day work week ordered for all nonoperating employes. However, you'll still be able to buy tickets at the Union Station on any day.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Joseph W. Riley has been appointed sales manager of Nedick's, Inc., franchise division . . . Hubert N. Hoffman, Rulon E. Rasmussen, Sidney Simon and Warren S. Stone, Washington representatives of New York Life Insurance Co., have qualified for membership in the 1949 Nylic Top Club Council . . . Irving Pirofsky, formerly of Daystrom Corp., has been appointed Eastern sales manager of the Douglas Furniture Corp. . . . Percy J. Trevethan, former official of the Morgan Memorial of Boston, has been named executive secretary of Goodwill Industries of America, Inc.

D. C. RECORD: National Airlines yesterday reported a record month in July for Washington traffic. The gain here was 10 per cent in July over June and 120 per cent over July, 1948. The Washington gain paced a system-wide increase of 8.7 per cent for July over June.

EARNINGS: Permanente Metals Corp., a Henry Kaiser enterprise, reported net income of $12,023,874 for the fiscal year ended May 31, an increase of 30 per cent over the previous year. Net was equal to $4.62 a common share, against $3.55 in the previous year. Production, sales and earnings all were at a new high in the latest year. Other earnings reports:

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—Grains drifted lower in a lazy, dull market on the Board of Trade today. It was one of the slowest sessions of the past few weeks.

After a shaky start prices moved up a bit in the first hour. This mild attempt to continue the advance of late last week never attracted any volume buying orders. Before noon the bull forces gave up; from then on the price trend was downward.

The only time in the session when volume picked up was toward the close. Selling pressure expanded and most contracts dropped to their lows of the day in the last 30 minutes. Soybeans and wheat were weakest while feed grains showed mild resistance to the selling.

Wheat closed ⅝ to 1⅜ lower. Corn was unchanged to ½ lower. Oats were ⅛ to ¼ lower. Rye was ¾ to 1¼ lower. Soybeans were 3 to 3½ lower, and lard was unchanged to 18 cents a hundred pounds lower.

Bordeaux Forest Fire 'Surrounded'

Bordeaux, France, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—A pall of black smoke hung over Bordeaux tonight from forest fires which have claimed 83 and possibly 85 lives and persons in the outlying districts prepared to flee should new outbreaks sweep closer to the city.

The new fires, whipped by strong winds, raced through the pine forests south of Bordeaux, but the Bordeaux prefecture said the biggest fresh outbreaks had been "surrounded" by weary, smoke-begrimed firemen who raced here from all over France.

The blazes flared up shortly before sunset, apparently caused from the still-glowing embers of earlier ones which swept through 125,000 acres of pine forests and left only blackened stumps, burned houses and charred bodies in their wake.

The fires swept the tinder-dry pine forest of the Gironde, the department of southwest France whose wooded hills long have inspired artists with their beauty.

New and uncounted victims were feared to be among those hills.

Gironde authorities said at least 78 bodies have been recovered and that many more may be found in the smoldering embers. In Paris, Ministry of Interior officials placed the bodies recovered at 83, with indication more would be found.

Red Writer Says He Used Eisler Data

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Joseph Starobin testified at the Communist conspiracy trial today that he once wrote an article for the Daily Worker based on material supplied him by Gerhart Eisler.

Starobin, United Nations correspondent for the Communist newspaper, said the article was anti-Fascist in nature.

Eisler, once described as the No. 1 Communist in the U. S., recently fled this country as a stowaway aboard the Polish liner Batory. He is now in the Soviet zone of Germany.

Starobin, a defense witness at the conspiracy trial of 11 top U. S. Communists, testified he first met Eisler in 1941 and they became "quite good friends."

As foreign editor of the Daily Worker, Starobin said he used material furnished him not only by Eisler but by other anti-Fascist refugees. He used the information, he said, to turn out stories for the Daily Worker under the pen name of "Hans Berger."

Earlier, Starobin admitted under cross-examination he once testified falsely under oath at a deportation hearing for Eisler.

5 Atom Officials Hold Talks With Canadian Experts

Ottawa, Aug. 22 (AP).—The External Affairs Department today disclosed that five United States atomic energy officials spent Saturday and Sunday in conferences with Canadian experts at the Chalk River atomic project.

While no reference was made to the forthcoming tri-nation atomic talks to be held in Washington early next month, the visit by the Americans appeared to be linked with those talks.

The announcement said the Americans paid a "courtesy call" on Chalk River, where an atomic pile has been set up. They were Senator W. F. Knowland (R., Calif.), and Representative Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.), members of the U. S. Congressional Joint Committee on Atomic Energy; H. Bergman, deputy director for the joint committee; E. L. Heller, of the committee staff; and Jesse Johnson, deputy director of the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission's raw materials division.

Teamsters Ease Gasoline Dearth In Chicago Strike

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—The AFL Teamsters' Union, whose 12-day strike against Chicagoland gasoline and oil firms has about dried up the gasoline supply of the Nation's second largest city, took steps to ease the situation today.

H. E. (Bill) Woods, secretary-treasurer of the union's Local 705, which led several locals on strike, said some 1600 tank truck drivers would be assigned to haul gas for independent dealers who have signed separate agreements with the union. The deliveries will be made on an around-the-clock basis, he said.

The announcement came on the heels of a conference between major oil company representatives and the union negotiators which made no progress toward settlement of their dispute.

Fire Fighter Dies in Idaho Forest Blaze

By The Associated Press

Fires in the Payette National Forest in Idaho took the life of one man yesterday as high winds churned the flames to new fury over 11,000 acres.

Forest Service officials expressed concern that the wind would fan the three major Idaho fires completely away from the 1500 crewmen.

Curtis Knudsen of Gem, Kans., died at a Council, Idaho, Hospital as the result of burns. Knudsen was the first death directly attributable to the flames which reached serious proportions more than two weeks ago. Three other crewmen in Idaho and California suffered lesser burns.

The Payette Forest crews were also cut off from air supplies. The turbulent air and lack of visibility grounded cargo planes.

The situation elsewhere in the West cleared somewhat although five blazes were still out of control in Yellowstone National Park in Wyoming.

Utah and Oregon forest officials issued brighter reports. More than 100 men, laboring over steep mountainsides, brought under control a 1400-acre fire in north Utah. It had broken out of control today for the second time.

British Exchange Teachers Hear Senator Fulbright

A group of 97 British teachers who have exchanged positions with American school teachers for one year were told yesterday by Senator Fulbright (D., Ark.) that their educational venture is the "most hopeful program" with which he was acquainted for making it possible for diverse peoples to live together.

Senator Fulbright spoke to the Britons in Hurst Hall at American University as part of their three-day orientation course with educational officials here.

"The Atlantic Pact, essential as it is," he said, "is of a temporary nature. The best hope for the long-time future is to build on real understanding."

Earl James McGrath, United States Commissioner of Education, who also spoke, warned them of differences in our students and those of European countries. "You will find our students more aggressive in asking questions than you have been accustomed to," he advised.

The teachers will be received by President Truman at the White House at 12:15 p. m. today and will be guests of the British Ambassador in the afternoon for tea. They will leave for their assignments after a final orientation meeting Wednesday.

Woman Missing After Threats for Protecting Dogs

Kansas City, Aug. 22 (AP).—A woman who has been receiving threatening telephone calls for her interest in stray dogs was reported missing today.

Mrs. Fenby S. Webster, 50, executive secretary of Wayside Waifs, Inc., left home last night saying she was going to drive to the organization's animal shelter. Her panel truck was found abandoned in the sourth part of the city today. On the windshield was a note reading, "Stay off Indep."

Associates said she had been receiving calls for several weeks from a man who told her, "Stay out of Independence. It's none of your business what happens to those dogs."

Mrs. Webster was the leader of a group which had protested to the Independence City Council over the treatment of dogs in the city pound.

At Mrs. Webster's quarters in the animal shelter building, detectives this morning found lights on, windows open and a half-addressed envelope in a typewriter.

Treasury to Cut One-Year Money Interest Rate

By The Associated Press

Treasury plans to reduce the interest rate paid by the Government on money it borrows for one year were disclosed last night.

The Treasury announced it will offer one-year debt certificates paying only 1 1/8 per cent—which is 1/8 under the rate it has paid for several months—to refund $1,292,443,600 in 2 per cent bonds called for redemption September 15.

Also, the Treasury announced that:

1. New one-year certificates of unspecified interest rate will be offered to refund some $6,535,161,000 in old certificates falling due October 1.

2. The Treasury will issue notes—of unspecified term or interest rate—"in connection with the refunding of the Treasury bonds called for redemption on December 15, 1949."

12.5 Million Recovery Fund Asked for Korea

By the United Press

The Administration yesterday asked Congress for a $12,500,000 emergency fund to keep the recovery program in Korea from ending in failure.

The request was made before the Senate Appropriations Committee by Dr. Edgar E. A. Johnson, the program's director, and William C. Foster, acting Economic Cooperation Administrator.

Johnson said the stop-gap funds should keep the program alive until Congress can act on President Truman's request for 150 million dollars to finance its operations during the 1950 fiscal year.

Woman Refuses Duty Payment In Dolls' Battle

Pittsburgh, Aug. 22 (AP).—Blonde and attractive Peggy Reiley came to town today and did battle with the Federal Government on a matter of principle—200 dolls in particular. And she gained at least a partial victory.

Peggy won't pay the $14.60 duty demanded by the Government for shipment of the dolls in her Dolls-for-Europe campaign.

But the dutyless dolls can't be moved to Somerset, Pa., where the 29-year-old woman's editor of the Somerset American has collected 1300 other dolls.

Peggy will have to unpack, tag, readdress and repack the toys in the Pittsburgh Customs warehouse.

The dolls in question were shipped from Canada by Margaret Wooding of St. Catherins, Ontario. Miss Wooding said today the Canadian government had assured her the gift could be sent to the United States duty-free.

Police Arrest 3 In Milwaukee Narcotic Roundup

Milwaukee, Aug. 22 (AP).—A narcotics roundup sparked by statements of three teen-age boys was revealed today by the Milwaukee police department.

Two men already are in custody on narcotics charges and a third, James Method, a night club entertainer, was named today in a warrant charging contributing to the delinquency of a 15-year-old boy.

Police said the boy told officers Method had given him heroin by injection.

The investigation began a week ago, the department said, after two boys and a girl were found in a stupor on a beach. One admitted to officers that he had been selling narcotics for adults on a commission basis.

Montgomery Boy Seriously Hurt Falling From Bike

Jack Wood, 12, of Barnesville, Montgomery County, Md., was seriously injured last night when he fell while riding a bicycle on a farm near Germantown, Md.

The boy was visiting his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Reese Waddle. He was riding from the farm home to a main road when his bicycle struck a mudhole and he was thrown.

The Gaithersburg-Washington Grove Rescue Squad, under Lieut. Raymond Lynch, took him to Suburban Hospital, Bethesda, where authorities said he has a possible skull fracture and multiple cuts.

Maryland Wife Slayer Sought in Oklahoma

Enid, Okla., Aug. 22 (AP).—The search for John W. Barker, wanted in Maryland for the murder of his young wife, spread to Oklahoma today.

Enid officers said they had reports that the 23-year-old North Carolina carpenter had been seen in this area.

Barker disappeared about the time his 21-year-old wife was found beaten and knifed to death August 5 in their tiny Army barracks apartment at Savage, Md.

The Republican National Committee announced that farmers and representatives of farm organizations will be asked to present their recommendations during the Republican Farm Conference in Sioux City, Iowa, September 23-24.

The Lyons Den . . .

By Leonard Lyons

NEW YORK.—I REMEMBER THE NIGHT:

When Monty Woolley was nervous, just before an "Information Please" broadcast, and explained: "The way Clifton Fadiman works, he could ask Einstein 15 questions on simple mathematics and Einstein would answer incorrectly" . . . When the lights went out at John Perona's Bath Club, and Bill Slankington moved the generator from his trailer and attached it to the electric cash register, so that customers could pay their bills . . . And producer Dwight Wiman announced that the prize-winning title for his new musical was "Higher & Higher"—the winner, a Hindu student named Sregdor Drahcir. The winner was Richard Rodgers, who had submitted the title with his name spelled backward.

When some practical jokers from the Stork Club entered the University Club around the corner and dumped a large can full of goldfish into the swimming pool . . . When Tommy Manville broke his leg, after carrying Bonnie Edwards, and asked the doctor how long the plaster cast would last. The doctor correctly predicted: "It will last longer than your marriage" . . . And Lana Turner refused a starring role on Broadway, shrugging: "All it would do for me is get me a job in the movies and I have that now" . . . And Mark Hellinger signed Aldous Huxley to work for him and said: "It's incongruous, but nice."

When Mrs. Raymond Massey was introduced to "Mr. Gunther," thought he was the furrier, and asked: "What do you think of Kolinsky this year?" John Gunther replied: "Kolinsky? Wasn't he killed in the 1938 Russian purge?" . . . When Bob Hope made his first trip back to N. Y. after his Hollywood debut, and was asked where he's staying. "Success hasn't changed me," said Hope. "I'm staying at the same old place—the Waldorf" . . . And Justice Ferdinand Pecora, on learning that the Wall St. Synagogue had to move from Wall St. to Maiden Lane, said: "The money changers drove the temple from the street."

When Alexander Kirkland's summer-stock shows at the Clinton, Conn., Playhouse were given in the same building which houses the local jail—and Kirkland was arrested, convicted and fined between acts, for having parked his car illegally . . . When fight manager Max Waxman noticed Jack Dempsey's distress at the split-up from his wife, Hannah Williams, and said: "I know how to make you forget"—and booked him for a "comeback" tour . . . When Maurice Maeterlinck looked at the N. Y. skyscrapers, from Louis Nizer's terrace, and said: "When Egypt's civilization began crumbling, they built the Pyramids as the symbol by which future man would remember them. These skyscrapers are the pyramids of our times."

The Family Scrapbook

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

When Children Bite

It's rather disturbing to most adults to see one child biting another. Even though those involved may be quite young, we get excited and want to do something drastic. Spanking, biting back, keeping the biter apart from the rest of the children are among the methods commonly used.

In most cases, biting is no worse than other ways in which youngsters show their hostility. Hitting, kicking, shouting, and biting are all of a piece. We do need to protect other children and ourselves from the upset and angry child. But we must do our best to keep him from feeling that he is a terrible kind of a person. Telling him quietly that we know how he feels but that we aren't going to allow him to bite may help a great deal. In addition, one may attempt to get at the causes of his anger and aggression. If possible, something should be done about changing these causes.

Gradually, youngsters will learn more suitable ways of handling the things that upset them. If they do continue with biting, it is especially important to get a clear picture of what causes continued frustration and anger and why he doesn't feel happy about himself. You can be sure it isn't merely a habit but does express real disturbance.

8 Sons in Service

Morley, Mich. (U.P.).—Joining the armed forces is nothing new in the family of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Ticombe. Their boy, Sidney, has joined the Army, making a total of eight sons they now have in the various branches of the services.

African Wives Call on New White Queen

Serowe, Bechuanaland, Africa, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Blonde Ruth Williams Khama, the London typist, who is to become the white queen of 100,000 African natives, met some of her future subjects face-to-face today.

Wives of the tribe, dressed in their best flowered cotton dresses, called on the future queen, and greeted her with the traditional welcome cry of "Balulubela"—welcome to our city.

Their visit salved her feelings, wounded at her cool reception when she arrived Sunday. Most of the black and white population of 30,000 in this capital town of the Bamangwato tribe stayed off the streets when she arrived with her husband, Sereste Khama, the tribal ruler.

The natives seemed to be gradually warming up to Ruth, although their attitude still was reserved.

TRY IT

AN INDIAN BONNET WITH INNERTUBE BAND

Dressing in an Indian costume gives the wearer a real thrill. For shows, pageants, or just playing Indian, the beauty of the redskin dress is spectacular.

To make a Plains Indian war bonnet, first see if your local feather dealer can supply you with a set of 15 to 25 matching turkey or goose feathers. Sometimes during the fall your poultry man can pluck some dry feathers for you. Glue or tie with thread some little fluffy feathers at the top and bottom of each big feather, and glue a bit of horse hair or thread at the tip.

Cut a 2½ by 30-inch band from an old inntertube and notch the edges. Cut or punch pairs of holes every two inches and slip the feathers in position. With a narrow strip of rubber tie the bands to fit your head, letting any extra band trail down your back. You will be proud of this simple Indian war bonnet.

TOMORROW—KEEP A SCRAPBOOK ABOUT YOUR VACATION.

What's The Verdict?

RELUCTANT OWNER

Q. An owner told an agent to sell his house, then went on vacation. The agent found a buyer, and wired the owner: "Have found buyer for $15,000. Advise immediately if accepted." Owner wired back: "Accept offer, asking $1000 deposit." The agent got the $1000, and filled out the usual printed form reciting the agreement and the payment terms, and this was signed by the agent and the buyer. The agent sent the paper to the owner, who refused to sign it and refused to go through with the deal. When sued by the buyer for the house, the owner points out that the Statute of Frauds says no action can be brought on a land sale unless the agreement or memorandum of it is in writing, signed by the owner or someone authorized by him to sign, and points out that he didn't sign the agreement and that he did not authorize the agent to sign it. Is this a good defense?

A. The answer to this defense is that the agreement is not limited to the printed form. The exchange of telegrams is part of the transaction. The telegrams themselves show that the agent was authorized, by implication, to sign the agreement, which he did. The contract, therefore, is binding and the owner loses the suit.

Her Cup of Coffee

By James J. Metcalfe

I like a cup of coffee and . . . The dreams that go with it . . . But in the hands of my dear wife . . . It gives me quite a fit . . . Because she drinks it all day long . . . From morning until night . . . And when the children are asleep . . . and out of sound and sight . . . She wants her coffee when the sun . . . Is barely in the sky . . . And after every dish is washed . . . And I must wipe it dry . . . Before and after lunch and all . . . Throughout the afternoon . . . From early spring to autumn and . . . December into June . . . And that would be all right except . . . I have to warm the pot . . . And always I must wait on her . . . When it is steaming hot.

Looks Like They Really Aim to Please

Blanche Berlin of 812 Randolph st. nw. was riding on a bus the other day, and couldn't help but overhear two girls in the seat ahead, who didn't like working at the Pentagon.

After discussing various other complaints, they eventually got around to criticizing the cafeteria. "You can never get a bowl of soup that isn't oversalted."

With that a young lady in the adjoining seat interjected: "I'll be very happy to look into your complaint about the soup, and if you ever have any other complaints, just call extension 74925, and we'll do what we can."

PROTECTION FROM WHOM?

Several readers have complained that they're annoyed by the "watch-your-car" racket in the vicinity of Griffith Stadium.

When they park on a city street, they don't think that they should be required to pay tribute —or risk having their cars damaged in reprisal.

Captain Albert Bullock of the Thirteenth Precinct acknowledges that there is a steady stream of such complaints, and that not even the most diligent patrolling of the area can eliminate the racket.

Two motorcycle policemen (four at big games), several scout cars, and roving plainclothesmen try to protect parked cars and discourage "watchers" from operating.

But the kids scatter at the sight of a policeman, only to bob up again a moment later. So there's not much the cops can do.

Of course, the best solution is a modern stadium with adjoining parking facilities. But that wouldn't be economically feasible without a winning team—so maybe we'd better just drop the whole subject.

SKEPTIC

Mrs. Arnold J. Levine of 2803 Terrace rd. se. suspects that one of her husband's ancestors must have come from Missouri. There are times when he's a hard guy to convince.

The other midnight the Levine phone rang. The caller identified himself as Cecil Austen, a Capital Transit operator who is usually on the Hillcrest route, out of Barney Circle.

"I've found your wallet," said Austen, "and I'd like to return it to you."

"Impossible," said Arnold, "I've got my wallet, so you've either got me mixed up with somebody else, or you're trying to kid me."

Thereupon Arnold hung up the phone, and went to check on his pocketbook—just to make doubly sure that he still had it.

But the longer he searched, the sadder he got. The wallet was nowhere to be found.

At 1 o'clock, the phone rang again. Austen was making a second attempt to return Arnold's dough—and this time Arnold's skepticism turned to gratitude.

They made a date for the next day, and Austen not only returned the pocketbook, but absolutely refused to accept a reward for his trouble.

Arnold's missus thinks the whole incident was positively wonderful. It not only turned up the money and the conscientious Mr. Austen—but gave her a marvelous chance to kid her husband.

WIDE OPEN SPACES

"What in the world do you do," asks Mrs. George M. Dove of 3503 Jefferson st., Hyattsville, Md., "when you're caught by the lights at extra-wide intersections?

"What do you do when the light changes while you're in the middle of the street and motorists who have been inching up on you during the yellow light suddenly leap forward and begin whizzing past you, fore and aft?"

What do I do? Well, I hate to admit it, but I'm a sissy. I don't venture out on the green unless I know how long it's been on. I'd rather miss one cycle of lights, and begin my adventure on a green light that's just turned in my favor.

It's a coward's solution—but so far it has kept me in one chunk.

Incidentally, like Mrs. Dove, I resent motorists who begin inching up when they're tired of waiting for the yellow, and are actually moving forward before they get the green.

Every time I'm forced to jump to escape one of these Nervous Nellies, I yearn for the day some irate pedestrian will rise in righteous wrath and strike a blow for us poor people.

DEFROSTING THE GENERAL

E. L. Springer of 2957 Upton st. nw. wonders whether deep-freeze units will henceforth be called Vaughanity cases.

Jean Broulik of 3850 39th st. nw. muses that the deep-freeze meller-drammer seems to be moving toward the inevitable line:

"Vaughan step further and ice cream."

A news photographer who was threatened with bodily harm recently while trying to take Vaughan's picture muses:

"I can't understand why he'd want all those freezers; he sure ain't no Good Humor Man."

C. Graham Eddy of 4813 South 28th st., Arlington, Va., reports that his punny wife suggests that the general write a book entitled:

"How to Make Friends and Affluent People."

Along Our Street

with Aunt Penny

When I started out for town this morning, there wasn't a cloud in the sky. But while I was coming home on the bus it started to rain. By the time we reached the bus stop at the corner it was coming down in torrents. I hurried under a store awning and would have waited for it to stop. But after a minute or two, I saw George Carlson coming out of his house with an umbrella. He'd seen that I was stranded and came out to walk me home.

The Carlsons are good neighbors that way. They're on my telephone party line and they're always the first to think of "the other fellow." They never interrupt when I'm talking on the telephone and they're careful not to tie up the line with a long unbroken series of calls. I'm sure they'd give up the line quickly if it were needed in an emergency. They've found that a little thoughtfulness makes party-line service more useful and pleasant for all.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Cost Row Blocks Airport Lights

(Editor's Note—While Drew Pearson is on vacation, the Washington Merry-Go-Round is being written by his old partner, Robert S. Allen.)

By Robert S. Allen

Installation of essential runway-lighting equipment on scores of airports has been stalled for months because of a backstage wrangle over costs.

ALLEN

Lack of these safety facilities is a serious flying hazard, as many of the airfields are useless in bad weather and at night. Numerous other airports throughout the country, which have inadequate lighting equipment, also are affected by the dispute.

Principals in the protracted controversy are the Civil Aeronautics Authority and the Welsbach Corp., Philadelphia.

Last April, Welsbach took over the sale of the patented runway-lighting equipment from the Line Material Co., Stroudsburg, Pa. The patents, owned by inventor Jack Bartow, Blue Bell, Pa., are so basic that CAA attorneys doubt whether any effective runway lighting can be installed without infringement.

Immediately after coming into the picture, Welsbach announced a new price schedule. It calls for a royalty of 80 cents a runway foot, plus cost of the equipment. For the average airport this means a $4800 charge for royalty and $26,000 for equipment.

The CAA balked at the price. The Government pays half the cost for control towers and other safety installations. CAA contends Welsbach's figures mean an added burden on taxpayers.

The company denies that. It claims its schedule will cut costs $900 on a 6000-foot runway. CAA denies the denial. It says Welsbach will boost expenditures $4000 for an average airport.

Cold Sober

The big party staged by the Indian Embassy to commemorate its independence was a unique experience for Washington officialdom.

The party was cold sober.

Everybody who was anybody attended the evening soiree. Mme. Pandit, Indian Ambassador, was lovely in a strikingly beautiful native gown.

The bountiful supply of alcoholic beverages usual at such affairs was totally missing.

Served instead were coffee, vanilla ice cream, and cakes. There was no limit on these. Guests ate all they wanted. Many had several big helpings.

Note—A Korean party the same day was an imbiber's delight.

Atomic Probe

Democratic members of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee will try to force a report this week on the long-drawn-out investigation instigated by Senator Bourke Hickenlooper (R., Iowa). The probe has been out of the limelight for weeks while the committee studied secret personnel records of the Atomic Energy Commission.

Some of these records have made spicy reading.

They are reports on the sex life of workers in atomic plants. The workers were checked by FBI loyalty agents.

Representative Henry M. Jackson (D., Wash.) asked Hickenlooper what the connection was between these reports and his case against the atomic commission. "These people might disclose valuable secrets under the influence of love or liquor," he replied.

One reason for the committee's delay has been Hickenlooper's absence. He was in Iowa mending political fences. He faces a tough reelection battle next year.

Democratic committeemen want to issue a formal report by September 15. Their report is certain to be a vigorous refutation of Hickenlooper's charge of "incredible mismanagement" by AEC. He and other Republican committee members will undoubtedly put out a report of their own.

Taking no Chance

Retired General John De Witt is taking no chances on returning to California. As wartime commander of the Fourth United States Army, he issued the order removing Japanese from the West Coast. Now living in the East, De Witt wants to take up residence in San Francisco. But before doing so he sought legal opinion on whether he would be subject to action by a Japanese for the order issued seven years ago.

Rita's Children to Get Muslim Bringing Up

Karachi, Pakistan, Aug. 22 (U.P.). Prince Aly Khan has informed the Ismaili supreme council that any children born to him and Rita Hayworth will be brought up as Muslims, it was disclosed today.

(Aly Khan, in confirmed reports Rita was expecting a baby, said he was "particularly annoyed" with press reports that the child would be baptized in the Catholic Church, the faith in which Rita was brought up.)
